Based on Boulder Dog Bite Lawyer by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after a dog bite?

A: Seek medical attention right away, even if the bite seems minor. Dog bites can cause deep infections that may not be visible on the surface. Report the bite to Boulder Animal Control to create an official record and ensure the dog is evaluated for rabies.

Q: Why is it important to report a dog bite?

A: Reporting the bite to Boulder Animal Control creates an official record of the incident. This is crucial for your claim and ensures the dog is evaluated for rabies, which is a serious health concern.

Q: What information do I need from the dog owner?

A: Collect the dog owner's name, address, and homeowner's insurance details. This information is essential for pursuing compensation for your injuries.

Q: Should I take pictures after a dog bite?

A: Yes, take photos of your injuries and the location where the bite occurred. Visual documentation is important evidence for your case.

Q: What kind of injuries can dog bites cause?

A: Dog bites can cause deep infections that are not always visible on the surface. Prompt medical attention is vital to address potential complications.

Q: Do I need to speak with the insurance company right away?

A: No, you should call a dog bite lawyer before speaking with any insurance company. They can handle communications with the insurance adjusters on your behalf.

Q: What if the dog bite seems minor?

A: Even if the bite seems minor, it's crucial to get medical attention immediately. Deep infections can develop from seemingly small wounds.

Q: Can a dog bite lawyer help me with my case?

A: Yes, a dog bite lawyer can guide you through the legal process, help you gather evidence, and negotiate with insurance companies to ensure you receive fair compensation.

Q: What is the role of Boulder Animal Control?

A: Boulder Animal Control handles the official reporting of dog bites. They create a record of the incident and ensure the dog is evaluated for rabies.

Q: Why is documenting everything important?

A: Documenting all aspects of the incident, including injuries, location, and owner information, provides crucial evidence for your personal injury claim.
