

Pueblo Intersection Accident FAQ

Answers to common questions about intersection accidents in Pueblo.

Based on Pueblo Intersection Accident Lawyer by McCormick and Murphy

Q: What should I do immediately after an intersection accident?

A: Seek medical attention first, even if you feel fine. Then, document the accident scene by taking photos of vehicle damage, the intersection, traffic signals, and any visible cameras. Collect contact information from witnesses.

Q: Should I talk to the other driver's insurance company?

A: No, do not give a recorded statement to the other driver's insurance company. They may try to use your words against you.

Q: Why is it important to preserve evidence after an accident?

A: Evidence like traffic camera footage can be overwritten or lost quickly. Preserving it promptly is crucial for building a strong case.

Q: How can a lawyer help after an intersection accident?

A: A lawyer can help by preserving evidence, investigating the accident, and protecting your rights against insurance companies. They can ensure you receive fair compensation for your injuries and damages.

Q: What kind of evidence is important in intersection accident cases?

A: Key evidence includes photos of vehicle damage, the intersection layout, traffic signals, and any surveillance cameras. Witness contact information is also vital.

Q: Why is getting medical attention important even if I don't feel injured?

A: Some injuries, like whiplash or internal damage, may not be immediately apparent. Prompt medical attention documents any injuries and ensures you receive necessary treatment.

Q: What if I can't afford a lawyer right away?

A: Many personal injury lawyers offer free initial consultations and work on a contingency fee basis, meaning you don't pay unless they win your case.

Q: How long do I have to file a claim after an intersection accident?

A: There are statutes of limitations for filing personal injury claims. It's important to contact a lawyer as soon as possible to understand your deadlines.

Q: What if the other driver was clearly at fault?

A: Even if fault seems obvious, the other driver's insurance company will likely investigate. Having legal representation can ensure your claim is handled properly and fairly.

Q: Can a lawyer help with lost wages and medical bills?

A: Yes, a lawyer can help you recover compensation for all damages, including medical expenses, lost income, pain and suffering, and property damage.
