FOR SALE — CROSSBOWS . . . They can't get it for you wholesale but Maj. Robert G. Schultz, left, and Capt. Daniel C. Conlon, buried under a pile of crossbows, will sell you one for only a small profit. The two are "proprietors" of Montagnard Industries, a Pleiku AB civic action project that buys native crossbows and resells them as souvenirs. The profits are not "pocketed" however. They are used to better the lot of the highland villagers by buying them items such as soap, clothes, medical supplies and tools. More than 1,000 bows have been sold, returning to the villagers nearly $10,000 value in cash and goods.

HAPPINESS IS 100 MISSIONS . . . There's no mistaking the feeling of these four F-105 Thunderchief pilots who are still wet from the traditional swimming pool dunking that marks the completion of the 100th combat mission over North Vietnam. These 388th Tactical Fighter Wing pilots are (l to r), Maj. Robert B. Piper, Maj. Maurice E. (Mo) Seaver, Capt. James E. Chambers and Capt. William J. Kriz.
