SOUND ECONOMY NEEDN'T BE AT EXPENSE OF PUBLIC SERVICES, SENATOR HUMPHREY SAYS

Economy in government "doesn't have to mean sacrificing essential services in the public interest", Senator Hubert H. Humphrey declared last night in an address before the Mayflower Church Political Forum.

"Balancing our budget is a goal we all seek, but there are sound ways and foolish ways to achieve it", he declared.

"You don't try to balance your own family budget at the expense of the health or safety of your children . . . neither should you blindly seek to balance the nation's budget at the expense of public health, adequate schools, and the national security", Senator Humphrey said.

Advocating a sound program of "making our government more efficient and less costly to those it serves", Senator Humphrey said the best way to achieve a national balanced budget was:

1. Keeping our economy expanding, "so essential revenue can still be obtained from lowered tax rates";
2. Closing tax loopholes, "so favoritism toward special interests doesn't shift an unfair share of the tax burden upon the average taxpayer";
3. Adoption of the Presidential "item veto", allowing the President authority to cull out individual items from appropriation bills without having to accept or reject the entire bill.
4. Continuation of government reorganization plans in behalf of efficiency and economy, along the pattern started by the Hoover Commission.

Senator Humphrey called attention to the fact that he was awarded a citation by the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report in appreciation for his floor leadership in behalf of the Hoover Report recommendations.

"We can and must have economy, but it need not be at the expense of school lunch programs, public health services, school construction and other essential and constructive public services", Senator Humphrey said. "There is a vast difference between sound economy in public administration and penny-wise pound-foolish economy that cripples government services and proves more costly in the long run through neglect of our people."

SENATOR HUMPHREY URGES RAISING MORAL LEVEL OF AMERICAN POLITICS

Good government is "everybody's business, starting at the ballot box", Senator Hubert H. Humphrey declared today in a talk before the League of Women Voters at a luncheon in St. Paul.

Senator Humphrey called upon women to "exert your wholesome influence toward raising the moral level of American politics and government" by insisting on fair campaign practices, and "decency in seeking the opportunity for public service".

"You can't expect high moral standards, decency, and ethics in government, if you permit candidates for offices of public trust to stoop to any level to get elected", he declared. "Ethics and decency in government begin with ethics and decency in bidding for your support. If elections can be won by trickery and deceit rather than frank discussion of the issues, then you can only expect trickery and deceit in government."

Senator Humphrey called attention to his own signing of the national "Pledge of Fair Campaign Practices", and his invitation for all other candidates to join him in an effort to keep the current campaign on a high and constructive level.

"But such efforts are futile, unless they win the support of decent people, reflected in the polling place", he declared.

As other steps toward raising moral and ethical standards of government, Senator Humphrey urged:

1. Establishment of a Joint Committee on Internal Security "to get results out of congressional investigations, instead of headline-hunting competition".
2. Adoption of a uniform code of "fair play" procedure to clean up such Congressional investigations.
3. Creation of a Commission on Ethics in Government to serve as a "watchdog" for moral standards of public service.
4. Establishment of a Commission on Campaign Expenditures to seek better ways of controlling excessive campaign spending and evasion of existing laws relating to such expenditures.

"I am proud to be the sponsor or co-sponsor of legislation covering all four of these important objectives, and hope to be able to press for action on each during the next session of the Senate", Senator Humphrey declared.
