I am sorry I missed Dick Nixon's talk. I was getting my make-up on.

* * *

But I do have some good news for Dick. Just after Larry O'Brien resigned as Postmaster General, he dropped in to my office for a long and friendly chat. I asked him one last favor: to issue a stamp listing your plans to end the war in Vietnam.

Dick, I am a little surprised to see you here. I understood you were turning down any further engagements with the press. I'm glad to see it's "anytime, anywhere," in the spirit of the season

* * *

I'm sure that Mr. Nixon has probably castigated the evils of the so-called credibility gap. Even though some of you have already expressed your views on this, I don't think you could call him a "me too" candidate -- no, it's more like a U-2 than a me too.

-6-

The President is afraid the campaign will decimate the Cabinet.

Bobby Kennedy wanted Larry O'Brien to quit to campaign for him. Now, Gene McCarthy is after Dean Rusk.

* * *

-7-

John Emmet Hughes says he quit to work for Rocky. I don't call that quitting. I call it retirement.

* * *

I understand the reason they wouldn't give Bobby a police escort in West Virginia is that they're afraid he'll leave his mark on the squad cars -- Neolite.
