VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT H. HUMPHREY

THIRTY-FIFTH SVENSKARNAS DAG

at

Minneapolis, Minnesota

June 23, 1968

(Introduction by the Honorable Donald M. Fraser, United States House of Representatives.)

Thank you very much. Iner Johnson, Governor LeVander, George Peterson and other public officials and distinguished guests, my good friend Hal Greenwood, the Honorary Swede of the Year, and the others being honored, our Queen of the Lakes, Karen Hegener, and our other good friends and associates who join with us, the Consul General from Sweden, and others, I am delighted to be back and to participate in Svenskarnas Dag and I am honored today with a very pleasant task. It is a very simple one because when you introduce two old friends, you don't really have to spend very much time telling one about the other.

As Mayor, as United States Senator, as Vice President of the United States, our next speaker has always remained a true and warm friend of Minneapolis and of all of us. We have known and watched this man as he has built

1 his record demonstrating his commitment to equality for all 2 Americans, showing in concrete ways his compassion for the 3 needy; a man who has been a fighter for justice and for 4 opportunity, and so it is always an honor for someone like 5 myself, a Congressman, to introduce a man who holds one of 6 the highest offices in our land, a man who is from our own 7 Minneapolis.

8 But I would like to go just a moment further, if 9 I may, today, because these are serious times, and I want to 10 tell you why I happen to feel very deeply and strongly 11 about this man. It is probably no secret to some of you 12 that over the past recent years I have been one of those 13 who have been critical of the past administration policies 14 in Southeastern Asia. I say, "past policies," because I 15 like to think all of us support the Paris Peace Talks that 16 are going on today, but on this account I am asked sometimes 17 where I stand on the race for the presidency, so I want you 18 to know that today I am not up here introducing our next 19 speaker just as an old friend, just as a matter of formality, 20 but because I believe in him and what he is and what he stands 21 for.

22 This is the man who helped bring about one of the 23 most important changes in world relationships through the 24 limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. He was a pioneer in the 25 efforts to get the United States Senate to concentrate on

1 the problems of arms control and arms limitation. He is 2 the man who spoke earliest about the abundance of America
3 and how this should be made available to those people 4 around the world who were suffering from hunger, and those 5 things that flow from hunger, and this is the man who spoke 6 first of the idealism of the youth of America and said we 7 ought to send these young people abroad to tell our friends
8 around the world what America is and to help these people 9 find a way for themselves, and this is characteristic of our 10 next speaker.

11 It is not an unusual thing that he should be 12 concerned about putting the talents of our youth to the best 13 service of our nation, because he, himself, exemplifies 14 all that we find best in our young people today; vital, 15 enormous energy, and throughout his whole record, demonstrat-16 ing an enormous capacity for growth and, in fact, he is a 17 man of peace, and so, Mr. Vice President, I apologize for 18 this somewhat lengthy introduction, but I am confident that 19 in January of 1969 we can revert to the old custom of 20 simply saying, "Mr. President." (Applause) But for now, 21 I want to introduce for you the man who has been a friend 22 of mine, one of the greatest public servants America has 23 ever had, the Vice President of the United States, the 24 Honorable Hubert H. Humphrey. (Standing ovation)

Thank you, Congressman Fraser, thank you for the generous introduction and one that I deeply appreciate and one that I am not quite sure I fully deserve.

Governor LeVander, how good of you to be here to greet me as I came to this beautiful Minnehaha Park, to this wonderful gathering of our fellow citizens and fellow Americans at Svenskarnas Dag, and the all-time Swede for every year, and any year, past, present or future, Iner Johnson. Oh, what a good Swede that fellow is. (Applause)

I understand he is going to go to Sweden this year, too. That will be good for Sweden and good for Iner and good for us. I want to wish him well.

To the distinguished speaker of the day, Dean Stendahl, I want to pay my respects. I regret that I was not here for your message. And, to the Consul General, Mr. Bengt Odevall, I want to express my greetings and thanks touyou, sir.

Now, some of you may have noticed that I had a very, very choice seat on the platform. Very nice. (Applause) I noticed all my men friends down here were looking upon me with envy, but what a special privilege it was, and is, to sit alongside of this beautiful actress, this lovely lady, Ann-Margret, who comes to our country from Sweden, and whose own state in Sweden is celebratèd in honor by

1 the sign that you see over there, just on the other side,
2 with the Swedish flag and the American flag. I think you
3 ought to know that I have been having a very fine visit 4 in between numbers here. Her husband has been keeping a 5 watchful eye on me, as he should. I remember meeting 6 Ann-Margret when I was being inaugurated as Vice President.
7 She was in Washington at that particular time, and she is 8 even more lovely now than she was then, and she was very 9 lovely then.

10 How good it is today to meet another dear friend, 11 Karen Hegener, our own Queen of the Lakes, Minneapolis
12 Aquatennial Queen, and I envy these young Marines over 13 here. They are going to be the escorts for all of the 14 candidates for the Mid Summer Festival Queen, the Mid 15 Summer Queen, and I believe these are some of the candidates 16 right down here. In case you fellows want to absent 17 yourselves, I will take care of this duty myself, but the 18 Marines are always on the job; and I see some more over 19 here. Too bad, fellows, you are on the wrong side of the 20 podium.

21 I came here today not to deliver you any major 22 address. I came here because yesterday a dear friend called 23 me and said, "Mr. Vice President, would you have a little 24 time tomorrow afternoon to stop by once again to Svenskarnas 25 Dag?" And, I said, "My goodness, I had planned on spending

1 the day with my wife and my granddaughters, my children,
2 but if you think I should be there, you would like me
3 there, I would be happy to come into Minneapolis for a 4 little while and join in this festive occasion."

5 I was told that if I came, I could be here to 6 present the plaques and the citations to the Mother of the 7 Year, the Swede of the Year and the Honorary Swede of the 8 Year, and I figured for a half-buck Norwegian, that was 9 a pretty good honor, and I decided to come. (Applause)

10 I almost lost out here with Ann-Margaret when 11 she said to me, "Aren't you Swedish?" Now, if I had been 12 the kind of a politician you expected, I would have, at 13 least, ignored the question, or sort of fuzzed up my 14 answer, but I had to admit that my mother was born in 15 Norway, but I did tell her that most of my brothers and 16 sisters married Swedes, showing a lot of good judgment.

17 I want to join with you in welcoming so many of 18 our young friends that I see here in these blue jackets, 19 and these young ladies in their lovely blue gowns, who 20 are visiting our country from Sweden. I met some of them 21 yesterday. They are here seeing us and watching us, and 22 I hope they are getting a fairly good opinion of us, and 23 then they are going back to their native country, and I
24 know that you would like to do what I want to do, give them 25 a good, warm Minnesota welcome with some good applause, and

1 we sure welcome all of them. (Applause)

2 Four years ago this month, I was in Stockholm
3 and subsequently, a little later, in Hargshamn, the summer
4 home of the Prime Minister of Sweden. I had a wonderful 5 visit there. I often think of the ride back by car from 6 Hargshamn to Stockholm, and I want to say to the Swedish 7 General Consul, don't you ever complain about an American 8 driver. That Swede that drove me down the road in one of 9 those Swedish-built automobiles went 100 miles an hour if 10 he went one. I never did as much praying in such a short 11 period of time in a foreign country as I did on that 12 occasion, but it was a beautiful sight. I comforted myself 13 by looking out over the vast and beautiful fields, going 14 through some of those lovely villages.

15 Many of us in this audience have had that privilege 16 to visit the native land, the land either of your birth or 17 the land of the birth of your mother or father, grandfather 18 or grandmother, which tells a rich and wonderful story 19 about our country because our country is many countries.
20 The love of America has been enriched by the love of other 21 lands and other people, and when I heard these lovely young 22 ladies with the bells, the Minnesota Mutual bells, playing 23 "God Bless America," I felt it was a special sense of 24 affection here in this audience because it is true that love 25 and affection, like anything else, grows with its use, and when

1 you have a profound respect and affection and love for 2 not only one country, but two, how much richer you are 3 in those blessings, and I think I sense that richness here 4 today.

5 I have travelled, as your Vice President, in every 6 one of our fifty states, Alaska and Hawaii, from California
7 to the Eastern Seaboard, and from Texas to Minnesota, 8 Wisconsin, Michigan, and North Dakota and Montana, and 9 Idaho, across the vast expanse, from Washington to Maine.
10 I have visited in over 600 of our greatest cities and 11 villages, and I have been to over 100 of our colleges and 12 universities. What a rich and varied experience it is to 13 see this America, to see its land and its people, because 14 good land and good people go together; to see the people 15 that are as different as you could ever imagine, the 16 Mexican-American, the Puerto Rican, the black American, the 17 Indian-American, the Asian-American, the European-American, 18 the Latin-American, all Americans, and even here, as I 19 look about this audience, I see that magnificent repre-
20 sentation. We have drawn our strength from many lifelines, 21 we have drawn our inspiration from many cultures, and we 22 have drawn our purpose from many peoples.

23 It is a fact that this is a blessed land, and it 24 doesn't hurt a bit to pause for just a few moments to sort 25 of nourish those blessings by our affection, and to pause

1 for a few minutes just to take inventory of those 2 blessings. This seems to be a time when most people try 3 to impress America and try to impress you by getting up 4 and speaking of our inadequacies and our limitations and 5 our troubles. There is something abroad in this land, a 6 thought or a philosophy, where you tend to prove that 7 you are a concerned person by exaggerating our inadequacies 8 and our inequities.

9 As one who has learned a good deal about this 10 country, and as one who visited, as your Vice President, 11 four continents, and almost 50 countries, maybe I am in 12 somewhat of a position to pass objective judgment on where 13 we are, who we are, what we are, and how we compare with 14 others; and what I have to say is not to demean anyone 15 else. Every continent, every people, every country, has 16 its glory. Every continent, every country, every people 17 has something good to offer, and I would not for a single 18 minute diminish that which is theirs in order to tell you 19 that which is ours.

20 But I can stand before this audience and have my 21 heart filled with gratitude and appreciation for what this 22 land is and what it stands for. I do think that we ought 23 to say, in all reverence, "God Bless America," and then with 24 a heart full of appreciation and gratitude, express our 25 sincere and personal thanks for what it has offered to us

1 and what it means to us.

2 Lincoln once said that it is the last best hope 3 of earth. A great American poet said, "Every man his 4 chance." This is America. It has been described many 5 ways, as the land of the free, and the home of the brave, 6 but I would like to describe it in the way that Congressman 7 Fraser mentioned it, the land of opportunity. The land 8 of opportunity with an everlasting and relentless search 9 for justice and expanding justice that includes more and 10 more people within its scope, and expanding opportunity 11 that includes more and more people within its reach.

12 This land was not built easily or overnight. The 13 men and the women that I see here have struggled hard.
14 If I know any part of America, I know this part; the plain 15 people of the world made America the great land that it is, 16 and the plain, hard-working immigrant made Minnesota what 17 it is, and the sons and daughters of those immigrants.
18 Few people came here with wealth; few, if any, with 19 prestige or with special privilege. Most came here with but 20 themselves, their will, their purpose, their loved ones 21 and their determination.

22 This is a land of the rich that was inhabited by 23 the poor. This is a land of the strong that was reared up 24 from people who came here tired, some of them, and even 25 weak. This is a land of opportunity made possible by people

1 who sought greater and more opportunity for themselves
2 and their loved ones and their children. It is almost a 3 land of contrasts. What we are was not given to us. What 4 we are was earned by us.

5 And, may I say that I think that is a lesson that 6 needs to be remembered today. There is no way that you
7 can give a nation greatness. There is no way that you can 8 give a people pride. There is no way that you can give 9 a people character. But there is a way that it can be 10 earned. You earn greatness. You earn through your own self-11 sacrifice and your own deed. You earn the honor of pride, 12 and you earn the riches that we have, the justice that is 13 ours and the opportunity that has come to us.

14 But, my fellow Americans, my plea to you today is 15 this: let us extend to others over and beyond ourselves 16 that same chance. Let us remove every roadblock that may 17 deny any person that chance to be a first-class citizen.
18 Let us have it clear in our mind and our hearts that the 19 family of man is not all of one color or of one creed, 20 that God Almighty created many people, different people; 21 and each, in his own way and in his own right, is worthy 22 of the respect of his fellow man, and, above all, he should 23 have it in his own heart to have self respect. Self 24 respect, which is the way that he honors his Maker and 25 honors himself.

1 My fellow citizens, I am happy to come home to the 2 Twin Cities and know that you can walk in the parks and 3 feel safe. Happy, yes, indeed, to come home to a safe
4 community where people can live together. (Applause)

5 In some of our cities today it is not safe to walk 6 the streets, nor is it safe to walk the parks.

7 My fellow Americans, the least that we should 8 expect from ourselves is respect for the law (applause), 9 respect for the law and I want this state of ours, I want 10 these two great Cities, and their neighboring cities, this 11 great metropolitan area of well over a million people, 12 to set an example for America. I want us to show the 13 way, where people of different races, creeds and nationalities, 14 different colors and background, where we can live together 15 as God's children in safety and in justice and in 16 opportunity. (Applause)

17 We know that it is an imperative for social 18 progress that there be law and order. You cannot build a 19 better America on the ashes of destruction. You cannot 20 build a better America by violence or lawlessness or 21 crime. We will only destroy that which we have.

22 So, therefore, the first order of business is to 23 see to it that we teach our young respect for their 24 country, respect for their state, respect for their city, 25 respect for the law of the land, and ask them to set an

1 example as Americans, a country that believes in government
2 of the people, by the people, and for the people, but it 3 will mean nothing if the people do not respect their 4 country and their law. (Applause)

5 And, my friends, law and order has a companion.
6 It is not enough to preach the power of law and order. It 7 is not enough merely to add more police, which are needed, 8 and they should be respected and supported. It is not 9 enough to merely talk about enforcing the law, even though 10 that is a minimum essential requirement of good government, 11 we must also talk about building a society in which 12 everyone has his chance, where everyone has a stake in that 13 society so that there will be a respect for the law that 14 brings observance of the law; a society of social justice 15 and opportunity like we have created right here in our 16 own midst in this great vast area of Minnesota (applause), 17 so I come home for one purpose above all, to thank you for 18 what you are, to ask you to do even better, to show us the 19 way, to show America that we can settle our problems 20 peacefully.

21 We do not look like we are the instruments of 22 peace at home or abroad if our doctrine is force and violence, 23 and what this world needs today more than it needs anything 24 else, is the blessing of peace abroad and law and order and 25 justice at home. That is what the people are crying out for 1 now, and we must help them find it.

2 This is not something that government can do 3 alone. Government is but an instrument of the people and 4 sometimes but an inadequate reflection. What is needed now 5 is the commitment, the personal involvement and commitment 6 of the people to live a life of justice, to live a life of 7 opportunity, to live a life of law, observance and law 8 respect, and to help people peacefully, to redress our 9 grievances.

10 How fortunate we are. Not a single injustice or 11 inequity confronts us today but what can be remedied by the 12 peaceful processes of democracy. Democracy is a precious 13 flower that belongs to us, that needs our constant attention 14 and nourishment. Never take it for granted. Always 15 accept it as a very fortunate blessing. This is my plea 16 to you today.

17 I must say that my heart is heavy and weary many 18 times when I see violence in our streets, when I see people 19 fighting one another at home, when I see people who ought 20 to be working together, standing in opposite ends of the 21 street, cursing each other. This is no way to live. I ask 22 that we find a better way, and a better way is, as Lincoln 23 said at one time to a mother, "Preach, teach respect for the 24 law."

25 Then, also remember that the purpose of this

1 society, of this America, is what our founding fathers 2 called for, those inalienable God-given rights; not the 3 rights given by government, not the rights given by 4 business or labor, not the rights given by any other power 5 except Divine Power, God Almighty.

6 What rights? What rights? The right to life, to 7 live, and not merely to exist, but to live a meaningful 8 life. The right to liberty, to be a free man with all of 9 the responsibilities that come with freedom; liberty not 10 being licensed, and freedom not being privilege, but liberty 11 and freedom carrying duties and responsibilities, and, 12 finally, that precious right that means so much, which is 13 exemplified here today in this great gathering in Minnehaha 14 Park, that right of the pursuit of happiness. Life, liberty 15 and the pursuit of happiness, the three great challenges 16 in rights that were bequeathed onto us by the fact of our 17 birth, by the fact that we are human beings, created in the 18 image of our Maker. Those are the most precious rights in 19 the world and let no one take them away from us.

20 Every right to be nourished, every right to be 21 guarded, every right to be used, the right to life which 22 denies violence and crime, the right to a meaningful life 23 which denies poverty and degradation and discrimination, 24 the right to liberty which means that you can be a free 25 spirit as long as you do not abuse the rights of others, and the pursuit of happiness which means the fulfillment of life. We were placed here on this earth not to be morose and morbid souls. We were placed here to be good people, people who enrich the culture that we inherited, people to add something onto that which has been given onto us. We were placed here to lift our voices in praise and thanksgiving, as was said here today, "God Bless America."

I take my stand for this country. It means so much today. Guard it. Protect it. Strengthen it. Give it your faith and when you have doubts, resolve that doubt in behalf of what this nation stands for, for its own people and for people abroad.

Thank you very, very much. (Standing ovation)
