

news release

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE • PUBLIC AFFAIRS DIVISION • 2600 VIRGINIA AVE., N.W., WASHINGTON, D.C. 20037 • 202/333-8750

Release for Wednesday 1AMs
October 30, 1968

For Further Information:
Ev Munsey, Ext. 201
DC-742

HUMPHREY SAYS DEMOCRATS CAN WIN, ASKS SUPPORT OF BELIEVERS IN DEMOCRATIC IDEALS

Philadelphia, October 29--Asserting that "we can win," Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey told a fund raising dinner here that "my vision of America these last few weeks has made me confident that fear will wither in the voting booth, that hope is in our nation's heart."

"Next Tuesday you will cast what may well be the most important vote of your life. We need the vote of every man and woman who can put his trust in me, who believes with me in the Democratic Party ideals.

"The choice the American people make a week today will chart a course for all mankind."

Describing the "kind of President I will be if the people give me that chance," Humphrey said:

"First, I will by my every word and deed try to earn and deserve the people's trust.

"Second, I will do everything within my power to heal the wounds and end the divisions among our people...between white and black, between young and old, between rich and poor.

"Third, I will make peace in Vietnam.

The man who is our President now is retiring. On January 20, I will be my own President. I will make peace in Vietnam--and I will make it my own way.

"Fourth, I will labor night and day to end the insane nuclear armaments race.

"Fifth, and finally, I will press forward the great work of building a better society for all our people. I want progress, not stagnation, in human rights, social justice, health and education, and continued economic prosperity."

His text is attached:

REMARKS

VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT HUMPHRE
FUND RAISING DINNER
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA
OCTOBER 29, 1968

This is the last week of this campaign. It's been a long uphill road--but we're going to win.

We're going to win for one basic reason: We trust the people--and the people know they can trust us.

One week from tonight across the nation the polls will be closing.

One week from tonight the people will have recorded their solemn choice... their choice of who shall lead us all for the next four fateful years.

And exactly twelve weeks from tonight that new President will spend his first full day alone in the White House.

For on January 20, when the balloons have collapsed and the confetti is gone, when the television commercials are silent and the crowds have gone home, --on January 20, the man will stand alone on the steps of the Capitol in Washington and take the solemn oath as President of the United States of America.

Under that man's leadership, this country will take a new direction--and so will the world.

The choice the American people make a week today will chart a course for all mankind.

I want to talk with you tonight about that course--about what kind of a President I will be if the people give me that chance.

First, I will by my every word and deed try to earn and deserve the people's trust.

I will tell the people the hard truths about our world.

I will open the White House doors and listen to the people.

I will close the gap between Americans and their government in faroff Washington. For the people are wise, and if we put our trust in them, we will earn their trust in us.

Second, I will do everything within my power to heal the wounds and end the divisions among our people...between white and black...between young and old...between rich and poor.

I will do everything within my power to help them work together and live together...to become one nation, indivisible, not two.

The President must guard the nation's security--but he must also bespeak the nation's conscience.

...more

PAGE TWO

I want to appeal to the best in our people, not the worst...I want to ignite our hopes, not our fears. I want to bring forth compassion not hate.

I want to lift up our people, not put them down. And I will do it, if you give me a chance..

Third, I will make peace in Vietnam. I am hopeful that that cruel war will end, and end soon--that the Paris talks will succeed. It would be imprudent to say more about them tonight.

But I will say this: The man who is our President now is retiring. On January 20, I will be my own President. I will make peace in Vietnam--and I will make it my own way.

Fourth, I will labor night and day to end the insane nuclear armaments race.

Here the choice between Mr. Nixon and me is clearcut. Mr. Nixon said last Thursday that he favored building an ever-escalating military establishment and increasing the influence of the military over our foreign policy and our national life.

I called this irresponsible--and so did countless Americans--and he tried to turn around 180 degrees in 48 hours.

My own position is clear. When I was in the Senate and President Kennedy was in the White House, I worked with him to get the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty--which Richard Milhous Nixon once called catastrophic nonsense and a cruel hoax--and the world is a safer place today.

This very month I urged the Senate to ratify immediately the treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. A single word from Mr. Nixon would have ratified it. But he stood silent. Now, when it is too late, he says he is for it.

When I am President, I will press for the ratification of that treaty. I will continue to keep America the strongest nation on earth. But I will also explore every possibility that can halt the suicidal nuclear arms race--before the nuclear arms race halts mankind.

Fifth, and finally, I will press forward the great work of building a better society for all our people.

I want progress, not stagnation, in human rights...social justice... health and education..and continued economic prosperity..

Mr. Agnew says if you've seen one slum, you've seen them all.

I say if you've seen one slum you've seen too many.

This has been the great work of the Democratic Party, begun by Franklin Roosevelt--indeed, begun by Woodrow Wilson.

...more

PAGE THREE

Some say this is ancient history. But the ideal they stood for is not history--it is our future.

It is the American dream--

--to give every child a chance;

--to get as good a doctor for the poor as for the rich;

--to work without letup to end poverty;

--to see that every man and woman has a job;

--and to build the society of our dreams.

...more

PAGE FOUR

During the last two months of constant travel, I have seen the wealth of this nation.

I have seen a people aglow with vigor and on the move.

My vision of America these last few weeks has made me confident:

-- that fear will wither in the voting booth;

-- that hope is in our nation's heart;

-- that greatness will win the day ... in this election, and in the next four years.

Now my friends, a final word about this election.

Next Tuesday you will cast what may well be the most important vote of your life.

Everybody agrees that Mr. Nixon has been running a slick campaign.

We haven't. We've just been talking sense to the American people.

It's been uphill.

But now it's moving ... and gaining momentum every minute. I've felt it all last week and this, from New York to California, from Albuquerque to Akron, from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh.

I don't care what the pollsters say: We can win.

And Mr. Nixon knows it. Let me tell you something. This next seven days is going to be the longest seven days in Mr. Nixon's life.

But to win, we need every vote. We need the vote of every man and woman who can put his trust in me ... who believes with me in the Democratic Party ideals.

And Pennsylvania can be decisive. The keystone state can be the key to this election. Pennsylvania can take the lead in choosing the next President -- and the course our country will take in the next four years.

If you're undecided, decide.

This election is too important for anybody to stay home.

America needs you, every one of you -- and now.

John F. Kennedy had a favorite quotation from Dante. It went:

"The hottest places in hell are reserved for those who, in a time of great moral crisis, maintain their neutrality."

I ask your help in this election.

# #

REMARKS OF VICE-PRESIDENT HUMPHREY
CIVIC CENTER
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29, 1968

VICE-PRESIDENT HUMPHREY: Thank you. Thank you very much. Thank you very much, friends. Thank you, my fellow democrats -- thank you.

Oh, my, my, my. Thank you very much.

First, my respects to the distinguished members of the clergy -- and to you, this wonderful friend, this great Mayor of a great city, and a great Democrat -- Jim Tate.

(Applause)

And the next United States Senator, and the United States Senator, and a wonderful United States Senator, Joe Clark. Good to be with you, Joe.

(Applause)

All of these Congressmen that are here, that have been mentioned. But I don't want -- I don't want to fail to mention them once again.

This fine young man that is to my right and your left, that is one of the truly gifted, talented leaders in this party, Congressman Green. Isn't he a wonderful man for you?

(Applause)

And Bill Barrett is here with us tonight, another one of our stalwarts.

Bob Nix, that has been with me today.

(Applause)

And Jimmy Byrnes is here with us tonight, also. Joshua Eilberg, that you have got to re-elect.

And as long as we are in the spirit, don't forget our good friend, Judge Carcone that is here with us tonight.

And the darling of them all -- Grace Sloane -- she is here with us.

And a man that I predict has an unlimited future in this State -- Bob Casey, your Auditor General.

(Applause)

And we also welcome the Mayor of Pittsburgh, Joe Barr.

(Applause)

And we surely do welcome a great Governor of this State, in my book still Governor, Governor Leader of the State of Pennsylvania.

(Applause)

There are a thousand people that I would like to just say hello to privately here tonight. But time forbids.

You know, I remember being in this hall in 1948. And I remember that we went on to victory from this hall in 1948.

(Applause)

And I remember that on that platform, or somewhere in this hall, stood a man that had been back in the curtains for a long time. They said he didn't have a chance to win. But he had the spirit of a giant, and he came out here, and he talked to us with fire, and he talked to us with determination, and he went on to become President of the United States again -- and he is my idol in politics -- Harry Truman.

(Applause)

I made up my mind when I entered this campaign that I was not going to let down the man that became my honorary chairman. And I am the first candidate for the office of President that ever had a former President as chairman. And I want Harry Truman to listen to me tonight out in Independence, Missouri.

Mr. President, you are going to have another Democrat in the White House comes January 20.

(Applause)

And we are going to depend on the great city of Philadelphia, all this great metropolitan area to produce that majority that will withstand any onslaught in this state.

So you folks get down to business now, and let's win this election for sure.

(Applause)

Oh, I got so much I want to tell you.

Gosh, it's good tonight to feel this good.

You know what? They tell me that Mr. Nixon has to take sleeping pills now we have got him so upset.

(Applause)

I tell you things have changed since we saw each other the last time. There is something that is happening in America, and there is something that is happening in this party. And I'll tell you what it is. We've got the show on the road, and we are going to take the show right smack bang into Washington, D.C.

(Applause)

And tonight, ladies and gentlemen, every single segment and faction of this party of ours, of the Democratic Party, every one of them, every group is united behind the candidacy of Humphrey and Muskie tonight.

(Applause)

It has been a long uphill fight. You know it and I know it.

But I'll tell you, the tougher the battle, the greater the glory on the night of November 5. That's the way to look at it.

And we are going to win.

(Applause)

We are going to win this election for one basic reason. We are going to win it because we trust the people and the people trust the Democratic Party and its leadership. That is why we are going to win this election.

(Applause)

You know, Mr. Nixon has been going around thinking he had this election in the bag. Oh, yes. I've been reading about it. If you don't think it was something to look at, you ought to be in my position and have read about it as long as I have -- week after week -- all the pundits, all the commentators said: it's all over. Mr. Nixon has it in the bag.

He may.

But I want to tell you something. On November 5, when he opens that bag, out is going to jump Humphrey and Muskie.

(Applause)

You know, friends, this is the right time of the year to have that upward drive, that momentum. We are soon going to have our children out, you know, and our grandchildren. They are going to be out knocking at the doors. They are going to say -- tricks or treats.

You know, Mr. Nixon has been giving you tricks for years -- for years. Now on November 5 we can have some treats. We can have a Democratic victory.

You know, I've been trying to get Mr. Nixon to stand on a platform with me, do a little talking to the American people.

I sort of thought that if a man was going to be President, wanted to be President, he might be called upon to meet with the leaders of other countries, he might be called upon to defend our interests in debate with the leaders of even countries that are antagonistic to us.

And I thought that that same man might have the courage, might have the willingness to meet a fellow American on the same stage, at the same time, before the same audience, to discuss his case. Because, ladies and gentlemen, if he doesn't have a case that can stand up to my argument, what makes you think that he can represent the American case anyplace else.

(Applause)

Mr. Nixon has taken the American public for granted.

I am asking this audience tonight -- I am asking this audience tonight to redouble its efforts. You are the troops. You are the front line fighters in this battle for progressive democracy.

Now a single man on this platform would be where he is in public life were it not for you. We are all indebted to you. You make possible our victories.

And I come back to you once again, asking you to make possible a victory that very few thought was possible.

Let's perform the political miracle of 1968 -- and we can do it with the Democratic national ticket.

(Applause)

Look at this audience tonight. Just look around you.

Here we are -- neighbors and friends. Here we are, white and black, business and labor, students and older people -- here we are. That is what makes this country. And this is the kind of a country we are going to build up.

But you know, I wanted to get Mr. Nixon around to talk to me, because I had some questions I wanted to ask him. I wanted him to answer some of the questions that Joe Clark put here tonight.

I jotted down just a few.

You know, they got the billboards around the country that say "Nixon's the One." That's right. I'll say he is.

(Laughter)

And what a one.

Let me ask you this question.

Who is the man that stabbed in the back the federal aid for education program that would have helped our children? You know -- Nixon's the one -- that's right.

Who is the one that called the Peace Corps a haven for draft dodgers?

(Shouts of "Nixon's the one")

Nixon's the one.

Just get that, folks -- beautiful. You can really pin it down.

Who's the man that didn't want to extend and expand minimum wages for our workers that needs some help? Nixon's the one.

Who's the one that didn't care enough about our grandparents, that didn't want medicare and said it wouldn't work? I'll tell you. Nixon's the one.

Who's the one, if you please, that said that the nuclear test ban treaty was a cruel hoax and that is was catastrophic nonsense. I'll tell you. Nixon was the one.

You can go right down the line, ladies and gentlemen.

Look here. I saw a sign out here a moment ago that said AFL-CIO. Who's the one that never voted once for organized labor?

(Shouts of "Nixon's the one")

You betcha.

And I'll tell you, my friends, don't want for him to vote or you are going to be ready for geritol and medicare.

(Applause)

Yes, my friends -- let me tell you that this man -- I read about him. They said he is the new Nixon. And I guess in a sense there is something to it, because I couldn't get him to debate me, but he has been debating himself.

Here is the man that said he was opposed to medicare, it wouldn't work, and now he says he wants to improve it.

Here is the man that voted against federal aid to education.

He was over here in Pittsburgh the other day and said he wanted aid to public, private and parochial schools.

Here is the man, if you please, that never ever once advocated a job training program in his life for unemployed. Now he says he believes in it.

Oh, my friends, that fellow has got quite a debate going -- the old Nixon versus the new Nixon.

And we find the real Nixon, and the real Nixon has never changed. He is the same one that ran against John Kennedy, and he is the same one that got beaten.

(Applause)

Why, this man -- I sort of figured that he would lose his cool pretty quick. You know, they said he was -- I read about it -- had a smooth, efficient, cool, well-organized campaign -- never spoke on a street corner like I have been doing here today, five times. Never went into the slums or the ghettos, like I do -- get out and see the people that are in trouble.

Oh, no.

This is the most deodorized, sanitized campaign that anybody has ever known -- the one he has got.

(Applause)

Oh, he doesn't go out to see them. And I'll tell you why. Because he never remembers them in the first place. He talks about the forgotten Americans. He ought to know -- he has forgotten more of them than any man that ever ran for public office.

(Applause)

(Shouts of "We want Humphrey")

Alright -- now wait a minute.

Let me tell you something. If you think you want Humphrey, you ought to know how Humphrey wants you.

(Applause)

I sure do.

Let's go down the character reference here a little bit more on the Republican nominee.

Here is the man that says that we could stand a little more unemployment. Yes -- he is an expert in it. He said in the Republican years that if you only had 4.5 million unemployed it wasn't dangerous. But he has got one-upsmanship now. He says you can go up to 5.5 million now, and it is not dangerous.

Now, let me tell you, I have never been for unemployment. But I am willing to make one concession. I am willing to have Richard Nixon unemployed for the next four years.

(Applause)

My friends, it was in this hall that a man walked out of here and led some others out when I spoke here twenty years ago. It was in this hall, about in this area, where Mr. Dixiecrat, J. Strom Thurmond, got up and took his banner and walked out of one of those doors that said exit. He left us. Not the worst, I might say -- let us the better. But he left us. And he walked out to become the third party candidate of 1948.

That man, twenty years later, found a new friend who was just about in his proper intellectual, mental, political attitude. He found a new friend. He went to Miami. And the man that walked out in Philadelphia in 1948 on the issue of human rights walked into the Republican convention in Miami in 1968 with his arm around Richard Nixon -- J. Strom Thurmond, Mr. Reactionary.

(Goos)

I think it tells the story. I think it tells a great story. I think it tells what I call the generation gap between the Democrats and the Republicans.

And I think it tells something else. I think it tells about the attitude about people.

The other night Mr. Nixon, for the first time to appear in two years on a national news show, like Face the Nation or Meet the Press or Issues and Answers -- he hasn't been on one for two years. I have been on at least forty or fifty during that period of time -- taking my chances, taking my chances.

(Applause)

He was on that show, and he was showing how he was going to trim the budget. Of course, he had added already approximately $50 billion for new armament, which we don't need.

And then somebody said -- well, how are you going to pay that? And he says -- Well, I'm going to have to cut out some other things.

I wonder what he is planning on cutting out. You might ask yourself.

Well, he gave us one indication. He said we are going to cut out the Job Corps.

I want to tell you what it means.

I don't say that the Job Corps is the best of all things that we have done. But let me tell you what it amounts to.

It amounts to an educational opportunity for young men and women that never had a chance in life. It amounts to an opportunity in training, and sometimes in just literacy, to learn how to read and write for a 19-year-old or a 20-year-old young man.

It amounts to a chance for that young man to learn a skill, to have a job. And of course, it costs some money. It doesn't cost near as much money as it does to send a person to a university. But it costs money.

And Mr. Nixon took my Job Corps program the other night -- and I am the author of it -- and he said we are going to abolish it.

And that is the way he was going to save some money.

A program that has provided an opportunity for 200,000 despairing, unhappy, unfortunate young men and women. Most of them today are productive citizens, workers, taxpayers. Twenty thousand of them went back to school. Ten thousand joined our armed forces. A hundred-and-some thousand of them got jobs. And they are working and taking care of themselves.

And Mr. Nixon says we will do away with it.

And as he is making that statement, a young man from Brooklyn by the name of George Foreman, a drop-out, a child of the slums that never had a break in his life, was standing in Mexico City, carrying the flag of the United States, having won the championship for our country and for himself --

(Applause)

And that young man -- that young man, 19 years of age, as he received the gold medal, and as the American flag was raised, and as our national anthem was playing -- that young man said -- "I am here to compete in these Olympics because I got my chance in the Job Corps."

And Mr. Nixon wants to kill it.

(Applause)

I want you to know that Mr. Nixon has yet to utter the first word of support for a project called Head Start. He has yet to utter his first word of support for our war on poverty. He said he wanted to double the rate of convictions. I said I would like to double the rate of decent neighborhoods in American for people to live.

(Applause)

There is a great deal of difference in this election.

Here is a man that challenged our government, said that there was a security gap in our country -- who played politics with national security. And he said that the security gap would develop into a survival gap - to frighten you, to mislead our allies or destroy confidence of our allies, and mislead our enemies, so that they might even miscalculate.

Ladies and gentlemen, I laid it on the line to him, and subsequently did the Secretary of Defense, to show Mr. Nixon that there was no security gap whatsoever, that this nation is the strongest nation on the face of the earth, and he knows it.

(Applause)

But Mr. Nixon says we must spend much more for more nuclear weapons. At a time, my friends, when we have enough to destroy all that God has created, at a time when one nuclear exchange would obliterate 250 million people in one salvo, at a time this nation has a preponderance of air power, missile power, submarine power, Polaris power.

Mr. Nixon says we need more influence of the military in the government. Mr. Nixon says we have to add more power. And when it was estimated in the New York Times -- not by me, but by them -- what this would cost, they said $50 billion.

Here is a man who talks about balancing the budget, cutting the budget. And in one fell swoop proposes a $50 billion addition, or cut it in half, $25 billion addition for weapons that are unneeded.

What Mr. Nixon ought to do is join me in seeing to it that a treaty that is pending in the Senate to stop the spread of nuclear weapons is ratified so that mankind has some safety.

(Applause)

Ladies and gentlemen, we are fighting over jobs. The last time the Republicans were in, they had three recessions, three job-killing recessions. And Philadelphia was in trouble, and Pennsylvania was in trouble.

We are fighting over income. We are fighting over the trend of this nation.

Mr. Nixon goes to South Carolina and whistles Dixie and drinks mint julep, and he comes up north and whistles Yankee Doodle.

You can't have it two ways, my friends. You cannot be for civil rights in Pennsylvania and then think you are going too fast and too far in Georgia. It just doesn't work that way, ladies and gentlemen.

(Applause)

We are talking about human rights. We are talking about peace. We are talking about the economic structure of this country. We are talking about the care of our children. We are talking about the health of our needy.

We are not talking about handouts; we are talking about opportunity -- giving people a chance to make something out of their lives.

I am proud to be a member of a political party that in these past eight years under the administrations of John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, 12 million people have come out of poverty to become self-sustaining citizens in this country. I am proud of that record.

(Applause)

And I point with humble pride to a record of 92 months consecutive prosperity -- ten million new jobs, the lowest rate of unemployment in 15 years. Proud of a record in which more of our minorities are having a chance for the first time in their life to share the blessings of this nation.

We don't intend to turn this over to a party that looks to the past. I don't intend to turn this government over to a man that has made an alliance with Strom Thurmond. I don't intend to have any compact with extremism of the left or the right.

I intend to have this election won by the Democratic Party.
(Applause)

Ladies and gentlemen, I don't intend, if I can help it, in these perilous, uncertain days, when tragedy strikes us without warning, when men are shot down in tragic moment -- I don't intend to let a ticket, the Republican ticket, be the winning ticket.

The first decision that a Presidential candidate makes, that tests his character, that tests his ability, is in his recommendation and selection of the man that runs with him as his Vice-President.

Ladies and gentlemen, I say to you that I have given you the finest man in America in Ed Muskie as our candidate for Vice-President.

(Applause)

So there it is.

One week from tonight we are going to decide the course of this country. Twelve weeks from tonight a new President will be in the White House. Twelve weeks from tonight. And on January 20, when all of the balloons have collapsed and when the confetti is gone, and when the television commercials are silent, and the crowds have gone home, one man, with his partner, and Vice-President, will stand on the steps of the Capitol and take the oath, the solemn oath of office as President, and another as Vice-President of the United States.

And under that leadership, this country will take a new direction, and so will the whole world -- because what America does affects this whole world.

The choice that we make -- the choice that we make in this election will be the very thing that Abraham Lincoln was talking about when he said America was the last best hope on earth.

We are not merely choosing for ourselves. We are choosing for generations yet unborn. And we are choosing for a whole world.

I want you to know in the final moments now that I have with you the kind of a man that you are going to have in that office. I want you to know what my Presidency will be like.

First, I intend to tell the people the hard facts. The American people are not babies. They do not need to be coddled. They need to be taken into the confidence of their President. They need to be told the hard truth. And if it is a tough goal, we are up to it. If we need to know the facts and face them, we can.

The American people can do anything that they put their mind to, and you and I know it.

(Applause)

Now, I will open the doors of the White House and listen to the people, young and old. And I intend to close the gap between the Americans and their government in Washington so that you feel that you are a part of it, so that you feel that you are heard and listened to. And I will do everything in my power, my fellow Americans, as your President to heal the wounds in this society, to close up the divisions between white and black, between young and old, between rich and poor. And I will do everything in my power to make true the American dream of one nation, one people, united, one people indivisible. That is the kind of a nation that we want. And, ladies and gentlemen, we can do it together.

(Applause)

My friends, I know something about these American people, because I have spent many years with them. There is a basic decency in this country. There is a fundamental greatness here.

And the President of the United States must call upon that decency and that goodness, and he must call forth that greatness.

And I want to be your President because I know the times call for goodness, and I know the times call for the greatness -- not of a President so much as of the people. And together -- together, my friends, we can unite this country, together we can build trust in this country, together we can have friends and neighbors rather than enemies and strangers in our cities and through the countryside.

(Applause)

Thirdly, I will do my level best to make peace, to make peace in Vietnam, if peace by that time has not been obtained.

Tonight I am hopeful that that cruel war will end and end soon -- that the talks in Paris will succeed. And it would be indeed unwise and improvident for me to say more about them.

We all hope and pray that President Johnson may find the peace that he has searched for before his term of office expires on January 20.

(Applause)

But if he does not -- if he does not, then on January 20, high noon, it will be my responsibility to find that peace in Vietnam and to make the decisions and the judgments necessary to search for that peace. And I will do it, so that we may bring our men and resources back home here to take care of the job that needs to be done.

(Applause.)

As I have indicated to you, I will labor day and night to call a halt to this insane nuclear arms race that will consume billions of our resources, that raises the level of danger. The next president of the United States must have the courage to search for ways and means to stop this madness of armament that builds up and up, until someday it will explode and destroy us.

The job of a president is not merely to use power, but to find ways and means to have restraint in the use of power.

We need a world in which the tensions are reduced, and we need a country in which the anxieties and the tensions are reduced.

(Applause.)

Finally, my friends, I want to press forward with the business at hand here at home. I want an open society, open to all, room for all, opportunity for all. We need each other as never before. We may have to stand alone sometime, my fellow Americans. And when we do, we are going to need every American at his best. We cannot afford the expense of illiteracy and despair. We cannot afford the intolerable conditions in slums. And I was shocked when I heard the vice presidential nominee of the Republican Party say that when you have seen one slum you have seen them all. It was a sort of a Republican way of saying it. Let me tell you what I think. When you have seen one slum, you have seen one too many, and we ought to get rid of them.

(Applause.)

So I come to you tonight to ask for your help. I have traveled the length and breadth of this land as your candidate. And my vision of this country has made me confident. I have never thought America was sick, and I have never sold it short in order for me to stand tall. I believe that there is such strength of character in the American people that they can do anything if they but have the message, if they can but be shown the way.

I do not believe that America has lost its way. I think America is finding its conscience. And I am proud to say the Democratic administrations have led. We represent a party that cares for people. We represent a party that has compassion for the needy and the helpless. We represent a party that has unlimited faith in the enterprise system of this country, in our business and our labor, in our management. But above all, we represent a party that looks to the future. And it is to the future that we must cast our eyes.

The future of America in the next 25 years that will have a hundred million more people, the future of an America in the next few years that will be even more urbanized, the future of an America where sons and daughters, from rich and poor alike, will attend our universities, the future of an America that needs clean air and clean water, the future of an America that needs Americans, trusting each other, working together, praying together, educated together, living together. And that is the kind of an America that a president can help build.

And I come to Philadelphia, this home of American liberty, this city that gave to the world those great words of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, I come to you and ask you tonight to work as you have never worked before. I am willing to give the last ounce of my breath and life to this cause. But it cannot be won by one man alone. We are close to victory. We can close the gap. That victory is within our reach. But it is only within our reach if you will fight like you have never fought before, if you believe like you have never believed before, if you work like you have never worked before.

I ask my fellow Americans and my fellow Democrats to put yourself on the line, to put yourself as the patriots of old did, your life, your fortunes, and your sacred honor -- put it on the line. And if you do, on November 5th you will elect a Democratic president and vice president.

(Applause.)

Thank you.

- Rec Clergy
- Gov Leader
- ✓ Mayor
- ✓ Sun Clark
- Mayor Barr

- Green (Bill)
- Barnett (Bill)
- Ziff (Bob)
- Bennett (Jimmy)

Convention Hall
1978

VICE PRESIDENT HUBERT HUMPHREY

FUND RAISING DINNER

Demos.
United

Judy Sinton - Superior Court
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

Grace Sloan - Treasurer
OCTOBER 29, 1968

Bob Casey - Auditor General
Legislator

This is the last week of this campaign. It's been a long uphill road -- but we're going to win. ~~(election in 40 days!)~~

We're going to win for one basic reason: We trust the people -- and the people know they can trust us. ! ~~(X)~~ Trusts & Treats!!

↳ One week from tonight across the nation the polls will be closing.

↳ One week from tonight the people will have recorded their solemn choice ... their choice of who shall lead us for the next four fateful years.

↳ And exactly twelve weeks from tonight that new President will spend his first full day ~~alone~~ in the White House.

↳ For on January 20, when the balloons have collapsed and the confetti is gone, when the television commercials are silent and the crowds have gone home, -- on January 20, one man will stand alone on the steps of the Capitol in Washington and take the solemn oath as President of the United States of America.

↳ Under that man's leadership, this country will take a new direction -- and so will the world.

↳ The choice the American people make a week today will chart a course for all mankind.

↳ I want to talk with you tonight about that course -- about what kind of a President I will be if the people give me that opportunity.

↳ First, I will by my every word and deed try to earn and deserve the people's trust.

↳ I will tell the people the hard truths about our world.

↳ I will open the White House doors and listen to the people.

↳ I will close the gap between Americans and their government in faroff Washington. ~~For the people are wise, and if we put our trust in them, we will earn their trust in us.~~

#2 ↳ ~~Second~~, I will do everything within my power to heal the wounds and end the divisions among our people ... between white and black ... between young and old ... between rich and poor.

↳ I will do everything within my power to help them work together and live together ... to become one nation, indivisible, ~~and~~.

↳ The President must guard the nation's security -- but he must also bespeak the nation's conscience.

↳ I want to appeal to the best in our people, not the worst ... I want to ignite our hopes, not our fears. ↳ I want to bring forth compassion, not hate.

↳ I want to lift up our people, not put them down. ↳ And I will do it, if you give me a chance.

Third, I will make peace in Vietnam. I am hopeful that that cruel war will end, and end soon -- that the Paris talks will succeed. It would be ~~imprudent~~ <sup>unwise</sup> to say more about them tonight.

We all pray that President Johnson may find peace before January 20.

If he does not, on January 20 it will be my responsibility to find peace in Vietnam ... to make the decisions and the judgments necessary in the search for peace ... so that we may bring our men and resources home where we need them so badly.

Fourth, I will labor night and day to end the insane nuclear armaments race.

Here <sup>again</sup> the choice between Mr. Nixon and me is clearcut.

Mr. Nixon said last Thursday that he avored building an ever-escalating military establishment and increasing the influence of the military over our foreign policy and our national life.

I called this irresponsible -- and so did countless Americans -- and he tried to turn around 180 degrees in 48 hours. and then talk Peace.

My own position is clear. When I was in the Senate and President Kennedy was in the White House, I worked with him to get the ~~United~~ Nuclear Test Ban Treaty -- which Richard ~~Nixon~~ Nixon once called "catastrophic nonsense and a cruel hoax" -- and the world is a safer place today.

↳ This very month I urged the Senate to ratify immediately the treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. A single word from Mr. Nixon would have ratified it. But he stood silent. Now, when it is too late, he says he is for it.

↳ When I am President, I will press for the ratification of that treaty and <sup>will continue to be</sup> ~~will continue to be~~ to keep America the strongest nation on earth. But I will also explore every possibility <sup>to</sup> ~~to~~ halt the suicidal nuclear arms race -- before the nuclear arms race halts mankind.

5 Fifth, and finally, I will press forward the great work of building a better society for all our people. — an open society - open to all - room for all opportunity for all.

Ferguson

↳ I want progress, not stagnation, in human rights ... social justice ... health and education .. and continued economic prosperity.

The Republicans
↳ ~~Mr. Agnew~~ says if you've seen one slum, you've seen them all.

↳ I say if you've seen one slum you've seen <sup>one</sup> too many. ☹

↳ This has been the great work of the Democratic Party, begun by Franklin Roosevelt -- indeed, begun by Woodrow Wilson.

Some say this is ancient history. But the ideal they stood for is not history -- it is our future.

It is the American dream --

-- to give every child a chance;

-- to get as good a doctor for the poor as for the rich;

-- to work without letup to end poverty;

-- to see that every man and woman has a job;

-- and to build the society of our dreams.

↳ During the last two months of constant travel, I have seen
~~of Beauty~~
the wealth of this nation.

↳ I have seen a people aglow with vigor and on the move. !

My vision of America ~~these last few weeks~~ has made me confident:

-- that fear will wither in the voting booth;

-- that hope is in our nation's heart;

-- that greatness will win the day ... in this election, and in the next four years.

↳ Now my friends, a final word about this election.

Next Tuesday you will cast what may well be the most important vote of your life.

↳ Everybody agrees that Mr. Nixon has been running a slick, smooth campaign.

↳ We haven't. We've just been talking sense to the American people.

It's been uphill.

↳ But now its moving ... and gaining momentum every minute.

↳ I've felt it all last week and this, from New York to California, from Albuquerque to Akron, from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh to Phil to Memphis

↳ I don't care what the pollsters say: We can win. We will win!

And Mr. Nixon knows it ↳ Let me tell you something. This next ~~seven~~ <sup>5</sup> days is going to be the longest ~~seven~~ <sup>5</sup> days in Mr. Nixon's life.

↳ But to win, we need every vote! We need the vote of every man and woman who can put his trust in me ... who believes with me in the Democratic Party ideals.

↳ And Pennsylvania can be decisive! Keystone The keystone state can be the key to this election. Pennsylvania can take the lead in choosing the next President -- and the course our country will take in the next four years.

↳ If you're undecided, decide.

This election is too important for anybody to stay home.

America needs you, every one of you -- and now.

~~John F. Kennedy had a favorite quotation from Dante. It~~
went:

~~"The hottest places in hell are reserved for those who, in a time~~
~~of great moral crisis, maintain their neutrality."~~

~~Ask your help in this election.~~

# #

PHILADELPHIA FUND RAISING DINNER

(DRAFT 1 -- JBM)

This is the last week of this campaign. It's been a long uphill road -- but we're going to win.

We're going to win for one basic reason: We trust the people -- and the people know they can trust us.

One week from tonight across the nation the polls will be closing.

One week from tonight the people will have recorded their solemn choice . . . their choice of who shall lead us all for the next four fateful years.

And exactly twelve weeks from tonight that new President will spend his first full day alone in the White House.

For on January 20, ~~just twelve weeks from yesterday,~~ when the balloons have collapsed and the confetti is gone, when the television commercials are silent and the crowds have gone home, -- on January 20, one man will stand alone on the steps of the Capitol in Washington and take the solemn oath as President of the United States of America.

Under that man's leadership, this country will take a new direction -- and so will the world.

The choice the American people make a week today will chart a course for all mankind.

I want to talk with you tonight about that course -- about what kind of a President I will be if the people give me that chance.

First, I will by my every word and deed try to earn and deserve the people's trust. I will tell the people the hard truths about our world. I will open the White House doors and listen to the people. I will close the gap between Americans and their government in faroff Washington. For the people are wise, and if we put our trust in them, we will earn their trust in <sup>us.</sup> ourselves.

Second, I will do everything within my power to heal the wounds and end the division among our people . . . between white and black . . . between young and old . . . between rich and poor. I will do everything within my power to help them work together and live together . . . to become one nation, indivisible, not two.

The President must guard the nation's security -- but he must also bespeak the nation's conscience.

I want to appeal to the best in our people, not the worst. I want to ignite our hopes, not our fears. I want to bring forth compassion, not hate. I want to <sup>lift</sup> ~~lift~~ up our people, not put them down. And I will do it, if you give me the chance.

Third, I will make peace in Vietnam. I am hopeful that that cruel war will end, and end soon -- that the Paris talks will succeed. It would be imprudent to say more about them tonight.

But I will say this: The man who is our President now is retiring. On January 20 I will be my own President. I will make peace in Vietnam -- and I will make it my own way.

Fourth, I will labor night and day to end the insane nuclear armaments race. Here the choice between Mr. Nixon and me is clearcut. Mr. Nixon said last Thursday that he favored building an ever-escalating military establishment and increasing the influence of the military over our foreign policy and our national life. I called this irresponsible -- and so did countless Americans -- and he tried to turn around 180 degrees in 48 ~~CHK~~ hours. ~~And that's one reason why the people won't trust him.~~

My own position is clear. When I was in the Senate and President Kennedy was in the White House, I worked with him to get the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty -- which Richard Milhous Nixon once called catastrophic nonsense and a cruel hoax -- and the world is a safer place today. This very month I urged the Senate to ratify immediately the treaty to stop the spread of nuclear weapons. A single word from Mr. Nixon would have ratified it. But he stood silent. Now, when it is too late, he says he is for it.

When I am President, I will press for the ratification of that treaty. I will continue to keep America the strongest nation on earth. But I will ~~meet with other heads of state to negotiate~~ <sup>also explore every possibility that</sup> ~~halt~~ <sup>can</sup> the suicidal nuclear arms race -- before the nuclear arms race halts mankind.

Fifth, and finally, I will press forward the great work of building a better society for all our people. I want progress, not stagnation, in human rights . . . social justice . . . health and education . . . and continued economic prosperity.

Mr. Agnew says if you've seen one slum you've seen them all. I say if you've seen one slum you've seen too many.

This has been the great work of the Democratic Party, begun by Franklin Roosevelt -- indeed, begun by Woodrow Wilson.

Some say this is ancient history. But the ideal they stood for is not history -- it is our future.

It is the American dream --

-- to give every child a chance;

-- to get as good a doctor for the poor as for the rich;

-- to work without letup to end poverty;

-- to see that every man and woman has a job;

-- and to build the society of our dreams.

During the last two months of constant travel, I have seen the walth of this nation.

I have seen a people aglow with vigor and on the move.

My vision of America these last few weeks has made me confident:

-- that fear will wither in the voting booth;

-- that hope is in our nation's heart;

-- that greatness will win the day . . . in this election,

and in the next four years.

Now my friends, a final word about this election.

Next Tuesday you will cast what may well be the most important vote of your life.

Everybody agrees that Mr. Nixon has been running a slick campaign. ~~We are told that his schedule at Buffalo read like this:~~
~~"8:47 P.M. EDT -- R. N. goes to podium. 8:49 P.M. EDT -- applause subsides."~~

~~I'll bet it did too.~~

We haven't ~~been running that kind of campaign.~~ We've just been talking sense to the American people.

It's been uphill.

now it's moving... and gaining momentum every minute.
~~But it's starting to move.~~ I've felt it all last week and this, from New York to California, from Albuquerque to Akron, from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh.

I don't care what the pollsters say: We can win.

And Mr. Nixon knows it. Let me tell you something. This next seven days is going to be the longest seven days in Mr. Nixon's life.

But to win, we need every vote. We need the vote of every man and woman who can put his trust in me... who believes with me in the Democratic Party ideals.

And Pennsylvania can be decisive. The keystone state can be the key to this election. Pennsylvania can take the lead in choosing the next President -- and the course our country will take in the next four years.

If you're undecided, decide.

This election is too important for anybody to stay home.

America needs you, every one of you -- and now.

John F. Kennedy had a favorite quotation from Dante. It went:

"The hottest places in hell are reserved for those who, in a time of great moral crisis, maintain their neutrality."

I ask your help in this election.

Minnesota Historical Society

Copyright in this digital version belongs to the Minnesota Historical Society and its content may not be copied without the copyright holder's express written permission. Users may print, download, link to, or email content, however, for individual use.

To request permission for commercial or educational use, please contact the Minnesota Historical Society.

www.mnhs.org