Part of St. Paul's historic Union Depot, now converted for use as a restaurant.

Many units of affordable rental housing with high ceilings and spacious interiors for working and living have been built. As much as 29% of Lowertown's housing has been designed and built for lower or moderate income residents.

Historic Mears Park, our "village green", was renewed with attractive water features and pergola, and now attracts thousands of people through the day.

Once a street of empty warehouses, now successfully rehabilitated for contemporary re-use as housing, offices, retail and restaurants.
