Dear Sir,

I am somewhat surprised to learn from my sister, who arrived here today, that in settling for her services up to the present, your steward repudiates the contract entered into before she left Scotland, and confirmed after her arrival in this country viz; that she was to have her passage money, cable and other expenses refunded in addition to the salary agreed upon.

I feel confident that neither Mrs Hill nor yourself personally, know anything about this arrangement, and that it is very far from your intention to perpetrate, or allow to be perpetrated, any injustice, therefore before moving in the matter I feel it only right to acquaint you with the facts in the case, being assured that when the matter receives your personal attention, the agreement made in your name, will be bully and fairly carried out.

It is not questioned, so far as I am aware, that she has fulfilled her part of the contract, and whilst she feels she has somewhat of a grievance in being brought from a lucrative position to a foreign country and in a few weeks turned adrift without any fault on her part, she asks only for a settlement in accordance with her agreement, without prejudice to any future claim on her part, in case these very moderate demands be not satisfactorily settled. Yours truly
