Minnesota Magdalen Society.

In response to the request of several clergymen and prominent citizens at the time of the convention of charities, held in St. Paul last autumn, the Magdalen Society have prepared the following statistics: To show why the "Home" was opened, we copy from the first annual report by the president, Mrs. D. S. B. Johnston, who is now in her Heavenly home: "In August, 1873, five persons belonging to houses of ill-fame came to the Woman's Christian Association asking for help to turn from their lives of shame. The association at once published a call for the christian women of St. Paul to meet them at Plymouth Church for the purpose of establishing a Christian Home for the reformation of fallen women. The result of this meeting was the organization of the Magdalen Society of Minnesota, under whose auspices the Woman's Christian Home came into existence the following October, and was formally opened the first of November, the first inmate being received after 9 o'clock p. m., the daughter of the keeper of one of the most notorious houses in the city being the applicant. The five who first applied had left the city long before our "Home" was started (as the city was then governed for a short time according to the charter.)"

The matron's reports show the number cared for is about one hundred and seventy-eight, but owing to the loss of the reports of two months in 1875, and of two months in 1878, we cannot give the exact number. This does not include the infants born in the "Home," as they do not affect the questions at issue, namely, as to how the work wears, and the desirability of continuing in it.

It is known to all who have interested themselves in our work, that we have cared for two classes of fallen women. One especially encouraging feature of what we have done has been with the young mothers of
