THE ORIGINS OF THE UNITED NATIONS ASSOCIATION

he United Nations Association of the United States of America (UNA-USA) celebrates its 25th Anniversary in 1989, but its story really begins in 1923, the founding year of its progenitor, the League of Nations Association (LNA). The LNA, a grass roots membership organization, was established for the purpose of cultivating an informed public opinion in support of U.S. participation in the League. At the birth of the United Nations in 1945, LNA changed its name to the American Association for the United Nations (AAUN) but not its essential mandate: to educate American citizens about global issues, to build an informed public opinion in support of the world organization, and to enhance U.S. participation in it.

In the early 1960s, AAUN Chairman Eleanor Roosevelt and U.S. Committee for the United Nations (USCUN) Chairman Robert Benjamin, recognizing the need for even wider public debate on global issues, sought a merger of the two organizations—the former a chapter-based citizen's association, the latter a committee of 138 national organizations supporting the world body. The United Nations Association of the USA, the nonpartisan, nongovernmental membership organization that resulted from this merger in 1964, was thus not as much founded as it was reborn. Fulfilling the vision of its predecessors, it has built an American constituency for international cooperation that is unprecedented in size and scope.

THE ASSOCIATION TODAY

NA is helping the U.S. meet the challenges posed by increasing global interdependence. Its programs, studies, and international dialogues are producing practical policy options for addressing political, economic, environmental, and security problems that require global cooperation. Its nationwide network of Chapters, Divisions, and associated organizations is developing the constituency for sustaining such cooperative action. And this unique combination of policy analysis and public outreach has made the Association a vital link between the U.N. and the nation's policy-makers, between citizens and their representatives, and between policy-makers at home and abroad.

Underscoring the Association's role as a "citizens' think tank" is the MULTILATERAL PROJECT, which unites the public and private sectors in the search for innovative solutions to problems of global complexity. Each year thousands of UNA members across the country are joined by members of 125 affiliated organizations, student groups, and other interested citizens in a sophisticated examination of a major problem confronting the world community. The results of their research—and their policy recommendations—are submitted to UNA headquarters for national and international action. The action agendas proposed by these study panels have not only sparked immediate interest among government leaders but continue to influence policy in Washington and at the U.N.

Strengthening the Association's role as a link between the Capital and the U.N. is UNA's WASHINGTON OFFICE, established in 1972 to address the special needs of the Washington foreign policy community. While continuing to serve as an information source for members of Congress and the Executive Branch, the office is a catalyst for many U.N.-related activities in the Capital. In recent years it has led the Association's effort to return the U.S. to full payment of its legally mandated U.N. dues—efforts that led President Reagan (and President Bush in turn) to announce that payment of U.S. arrearages to international organizations has become an administration objective.

The search for international consensus on issues ranging from regional security to the environment has been visibly aided by UNA's PARALLEL STUDIES PROGRAMS with the Soviet Union, Japan, and the People's Republic of China—three ongoing informal and candid bilateral dialogues among U.S. policymakers and specialists and their foreign counterparts. UNA-sponsored discussions in New York and Moscow on ways to involve the United Nations in ending the war in Afghanistan were credited with paving the way for the shift in Soviet policy toward the U.N. And UNA's pioneering work on the utility of a U.N. naval peacekeeping force in the Persian Gulf sparked new Soviet interest in a U.N. presence in the region and led to the introduction of legislation in both Houses of Congress supporting the Association's proposal.

UNA's distinguished labor-management forum, the Economic Policy Council (EPC), explores the implications for business and labor of an increasingly interdependent world economy, proposing policies that strengthen market mechanisms and foster cooperative labor-management responses to international economic problems. A recent panel on Third World debt, with members representing all relevant parties to the debt crisis, achieved notable consensus on a new strategy for debt service reduction. Widely discussed at the next meeting of the World Bank–International Monetary Fund, the panel's report formed the basis of the "Brady Plan" enunciated by the new U.S. Treasury Secretary.

The Association continues its long tradition of involving young people in the study and discussion of multilateral issues. "Learn by doing" is UNA's guiding principal, and the MODEL U.N. program is the primary forum—a simulation of the General Assembly, Security Council, or Economic and Social Council, in which students take on the role of diplomats of U.N. member nations, debating and negotiating items on the Organization's agenda. In 1988, UNA initiated a new bilateral program that brings together the future leaders of the United States and the Soviet Union for discussions of global issues and for a Model U.N. Security Council in which American and Soviet students serve on the same "delegation," pooling their knowledge and enthusiasm to deal with common problems.

By long tradition, UNA serves as coordinator of NATIONAL U.N. DAY, October 24, an observance proclaimed by every U.S. President since 1947 and celebrated in hundreds of communities across the nation. Throughout the year the Association's Chapters and Divisions conduct a wide variety of educational and advocacy programs that likewise help to build an informed and vocal constituency for international cooperation.

Facing a world in flux, UNA has continued to search out the opportunities behind every challenge and to inform and enhance dialogue—among government leaders and between citizens and their representatives—so that opportunities for cooperation will not be missed. With the experience of a quarter-century, there is no doubt that the Association will continue to play a critical role in building a consensus for global cooperation in the years ahead.

COMMENTS BY

MAX M. KAMPELMAN

United Nations Association New York, New York

December 12, 1989

I would like to add my voice of appreciation to our co-chairpersons of this evening's gala event. With Cy Vance's absence overseas this evening, I will express my sentiments to him privately. What I have to say about Katharine Graham, I would prefer to express publicly. A lady of elegance, beauty, grace, charm and intelligence, I also know her to be a good citizen in the best democratic sense of that word, a person of firm civic pride and duty.

It has been my good fortune to live for more than 40 years in a community that has benefitted from her commitment to public service. She and her family and associates have enriched our nation's capital. They have exercised their power and influence with restraint and responsiblity. I express that tribute without hesitation and with personal appreciation. Thank you very much, Katharine Graham, for your contributions and your presence with us.

It is my privilege this evening to introduce to this audience Ambassador Vladimir Petrovsky, Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union. I do so with enthusiasm on this the 25th Anniversary of the United States United Nations Association. If the United Nations is to live up to its historic duty to play a constructive role in the striving for human dignity, peace and stability, the aspiration of all peoples, an atmosphere of cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union is required. We would hope that spirit of cooperation to be contagious and to serve as an example to all who have lived with tension and turmoil, too frequently layered with violence.

The United Nations has lived a checkered history and with its ebbs and flows, American public confidence has widely fluctuated. We today look ahead with hope that we can together strengthen the institutional fabric of the United Nations. In our Secretary General, the leadership is available to insist on the professional integrity and the standards worthy of a highly respected international civil service.

All of us must come to realize that to continue to use the United Nations as a political football designed to gain temporary national or bloc advantage is a formula for divisiveness and disintegration. Problems are not likely to be resolved by the enactment of sharply debated resolutions. They will be resolved by genuine negotiation. It is encouraging that this is the direction being urged on the member states by the Secretary-General. To negotiate is time-consuming. It is also risky. It is, in the words of my dear friend, Hubert Humphrey, something like crossing an active stream by stepping on slippery rocks. The possibility of disaster is on all sides but it is the way -- sometimes the only way -- to get across. Let us recall that our purpose must not be to score points but to solve problems.

The peace-keeping and peace-seeking function of the United Nations must increasingly be emphasized just as the Secretary-General is urging. With the end of the cold war -- a goal devoutly to be wished -- regional conflicts do not disappear. Indeed, they may intensify. In that connection, it is regrettable that the United Nations has disqualified itself from playing a significant and constructive role in the Middle Eastern dispute between Israel and its Arab neighbors. The "Zionism is racism" resolution is a prime example of diplomatic mischief and irresponsibility.

Finally, there is the ever-present poverty in large areas of the world, with its accompanying hunger and human degradation. Too often this problem has been portrayed as a chasm between the have and the have not nations as if the solution is to make the affluent less so. We must reject misguided ideologies and irrelevant panaceas which have failed to develop the economies of the new nations, let alone feed, clothe or house their peoples. What is needed, rather, is a massive dose of freedom in lieu of tribal or military authoritarian controls and corruption. Democracy is called for. The nations of the Third World must find their own forms of glasnost and perestroika to lead them to new freedoms and free markets -- and it is the duty of those of us who enjoy the benefits of freedom to help.

It is this agenda and more that calls for cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union. It is this challenge that the U.S. UNA and the UNA of the Soviet Union have been together usefully discussing. We are encouraged by those talks and by our agreement to found a Soviet-American Institute on the United Nations. We are encouraged by Minister Petrovsky's presence with us this evening. He has been an active participant in our dialogue and an architect of the evolving constructive approach to the United Nations by his country which we are all observing with satisfaction. One of his country's most able and experienced diplomats, I am pleased to introduce to you Foreign Minister Petrovsky.

Lt. General Brent Scowcroft Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs The White House Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Brent:

Somewhere in your in-box is a formal invitation to UNA's Silver Anniversary Dinner, to be held in the UN Delegates Dining Room on Tuesday, December 12th.

I know that your scheduling is not always under your control, but it would mean a great deal to all of your friends here if you could be with us. You were an important part of this Association for many years and hopefully will again come aboard after your present service.

Among the expected luninaries will be the Secretary General, Katharine Graham, Henry Kissinger, Cy Vance, Elliot Richardson and Max Kampelman. It is designed to be a relatively intimate, elegant evening for UNA family and friends, rather than one of those noisy mega-events. Karen Akers will provide a musical interlude, but most of the evening will be devoted to conversation and a few brief remarks. Attached is another copy of the invitation.

If you could say a few informal words about your experiences with UNA or about the role of the UN in this changing world, that would be terrific. We are not looking for a speech or a policy statement, but instead a few personal reflections.

Thanks very much and all the best.

Sincerely,

John C. Whitehead Chairman of the Association

The Hon. Max M. Kampelman Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson Suite 800 1001 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20004

Dear Max:

It was good to speak with you today and I trust that you are not suffering too much in the warm and warped environs of Las Vegas.

A speaking scenario for the 25th Anniversary Gala is attached. It follows the course which we discussed over the phone. As you can see, we only need a 3 or 4 minutes informal statement from you about our Soviet program and Petrovsky's background.

You are such a gifted and thoughtful speaker that I would be foolish to provide a script for you. However, you may want to incorporate these points in your remarks:

 From the beginning, UNA has recognized that some degree of Soviet-American cooperation is a necessary condition for effective UN action, especially in matters of peace and security; though at the same time it is increasingly clear that this is not a sufficient condition in a global, multilateral organization;

2) For 22 years -- about as long as UNA has been in existence -- the Soviet and American UNAs have carried out a frank and far-reaching dialogue on global issues and international institutions, focusing on topics such as environment, human rights, arms control, UN reform, and trade and finance:

 Similar dialogues are being carried out by UNA with China, Japan and other countries;

4) The new Soviet embrace of the UN, along with the sweeping changes in Eastern Europe, the warming of East-West relations, and the election of an American President who has served as our representative to the world body, opens up enormous new possibilities for making the UN a more effective and important force for peaceful change in the world:

5) Seizing on this new spirit, the Soviet and American UNAs have agreed to found a Soviet-American Institute on the United Nations, to be cosponsored by the two UNAs, as well as to conduct joint Model UN programs and essay contests for promising students from the two countries; and

6) For fifteen or twenty years Vladimir Petrovsky has been an active participant in the UNA dialogue and, as Deputy Foreign Minister, is widely credited as being the chief architect of the new Soviet approach to the UN. (His bio is attached.)

As we discussed, the event is black-tie and we expect about 250 people (which was our target, since the room is small and we want this to be a relatively intimate and elegant affair). The Permanent Representative of the five Permanent Members of the Security Council and of eight or nine other countries will be there, including Ambassador Garba of Nigeria, who is President of the General Assembly this year.

It should be fun. Please do not hesitate to call if you have any further questions.

Thanks very much and all the best.

Regards,

Edward C. Luck

Speaking Scenario

UNA-USA 25th Anniversary Gala United Nations Delegates Dining Room December 12, 1989

6:45 - 7-45 p.m. Cocktails and hor d'oeuvres in the West Terrace

7:45 - 8:00 p.m. Guests move to Dining Room and are seated

8:00 - 8:10 p.m. Welcoming remarks and exchange of toasts

- John Whitehead, Chairman of UNA-USA, goes to microphone, welcomes guests and raises champagne toast to UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar and to the United Nations (2-3 minutes)

-- The Secretary General goes to the microphone to join John Whitehead and raises a champagne toast to UNA-USA's Twenty-fifth Anniversary (2-3 minutes)

-- John Whitehead thanks the Secretary General (who returns to his seat) and introduces Katharine Graham, Chairman of UNA-USA's year-long commemoration of its Twenty-fifth Anniversary (1 minute)

-- Katharine Graham makes a few informal remarks of welcome and appreciation to the guests for their support of the evening (2-3 minutes)

-- John Whitehead announces that dinner is served

Following service of the first two courses, the speaking program will resume. This should be by 9 p.m., or hopefully a bit earlier.

9:00 - 9:15 p.m. Speaking interlude

- -- Edward Luck, President of UNA-USA, will go to the microphone to acknowledge some of the people in the audience who have played key roles in the Association's history, ending with the new leadership team of John Whitehead and Max Kampelman, Chairman of the UNA-USA Board of Governors

 (2 minutes)
- -- Max Kampelman will go to the microphone to make a few remarks about the value of UNA-USA's East-West dialogues, especially the Soviet-American Parallel Studies Program, and to introduce Vladimir Petrovsky, Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union, a long-time participant in the UNA program, and a chief architect of the new Soviet approach to the UN (3-4 minutes)

Vladimir Petrovsky will go to the microphone and make a few informal remarks about the importance of Soviet-American cooperation at the UN and about the role the Soviet and American UNAs have played in encouraging this

(3-4 minutes)

-- John Whitehead will return to the microphone, thank the speakers, say a few words about the challenge before UNA-USA in a changing world, and announce that a few generous pledges have been made toward an endowment for the Association and that a formal endowment campaign will be launched before the end of the coming year; he will conclude by announcing that dinner is again being served.

(3-4 minutes)

10:00-10:30 p.m. Following dinner, Karen Akers will perform

10:30 p.m. Adjournment

-- John Whitehead expresses his thanks to all and wishes them a good evening

VLADIMIR PETROVSKY is Deputy Foreign Minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He served as a member of the Department of Political and Security Council Affairs in the United Nations Secretariat in New York from 1964-1970. Upon returning to Moscow, he became Counselor, Chief Counselor and Chief of the United States Section of the Administration for Foreign Policy Planning of the Poreign Ministry between the years 1970 and 1979.

Mr. Petrovsky was appointed as the Chief of the International Organizations Department and as a member of the Collegium of the Foreign Ministry in 1979. He has served on the Academy of Sciences Council on the Study of the Problems of Peace and Disarmament. He has been a Vice-President of the Soviet Association of Political Sciences and is a member of the Soviet Peace Committee.

Deputy Minister Petrovsky has a doctorate in historical sciences, and holds the rank of Ambassador. His works include "American Foreign Policy Thought" (1976) and "The Doctrine of National Security: The Global Strategy of the USA" (1980).

Dear Javier:

MAX M. KAMPELMAN

(202) 639-7020

It was a pleasure to sit at the same table with you on Monday night and to have an opportunity to exchange some thoughts. I hope we will have the occasion to become better aquainted.

In the meantime, you asked for a copy of my brief comments and they are enclosed with my compliments.

All my best.

Sincerely,

Max M. Kampelman
