Dear Lloyd:

It's a joy always to see your writing and the Life of Grant has my fervent prayers. When are you going to do my Young People's History of the Civil War and my What Became of guys like Longstreet??

I'm desperately busy here, doing both a screen play and some work of my own, and I don't think I'd better try to help you on the Midwest Roundup. But I wish you'd make sure that it includes the novels of Wallace Stegner, Ann Chidester, Maritta Wolf, and Feike Feikema. I would have more time when I return to Williamstown, Mass. -- where I have a farm now -- late in April, but that will be too late....Have you asked Paul Engle?

If I have any time at all when I return thru Chicago, I hope I'll see you. And love to Katherine.

Ever

The Sinclair Lewis family. Reno being known outside of Nevada for its divorce colony, the presence there of Mrs. Grace Livingston Hegger Lewis reveals the possibility of a break between her and the author of "Babbitt," pictured with their little daughter.
