Marshall Field's Designer Show

A Benefit for the Friends of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts

Saturday, September 14, 2002

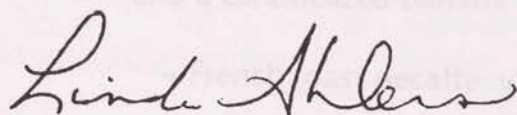

Thank you for joining Marshall Field's and the Friends of The Minneapolis Institute of Arts for "An Evening of Fashion for Art." We're pleased to welcome you back to Marshall Field's for this very special evening.

Through our community-giving initiative, Project Imagine, Marshall Field's works to increase access to, and enhance the visibility of, arts and cultural institutions in our community. Tonight's event supports that initiative by bringing you the world of fashion, showcasing the collections of designers who are artists in their own right, as well as supporting the education programs provided by The Minneapolis Institute of Arts.

We firmly believe in being a strong partner in the community, and are thrilled to help support the work and mission of the Friends of The Minneapolis Institute of Arts.

Enjoy your evening.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Linda Ahlers". The signature is fluid and elegant, with the first name "Linda" and last name "Ahlers" clearly distinguishable.

Airlines can stop asking about bags

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Beginning today, airlines will no longer be required to ask passengers security questions about whether they have kept a close eye on their baggage.

Ticket agents have been required for 16 years to ask passengers: "Has anyone unknown to you asked you to carry an item on this flight?" and "Have any of the items you are traveling with been out of your immediate control since the time you packed them?"

The questions are being phased out because they are a hassle and have never prevented a bombing or hijacking, James Loy, head of the Transportation Security Administration (TSA), said Wednesday. Over the years, they have lost whatever original value they contributed and can now be safely eliminated.

The questions take about 20 seconds to ask and that adds to passengers' wait in line, Loy said. Airlines are "delighted" at the decision, he said.

David Stempler, president of the Air Travelers Association, said passengers would be delighted, too. "It's about time."

Loy, who took over last month at the TSA, which was created after Sept. 11, said last week that the agency was considering eliminating the questions as part of a larger review of safety regulations. He announced then that passengers will be allowed to carry drinks, paper or foam cups through metal detectors.
