*"Early Candlelight," by Minnesotan,
Has Setting in St. Paul and Snelling*

The commanding officer's quarters at Fort Snelling were erected as a part of Fort Anthony by Colonel Josiah Snelling. It is termed by historians as the oldest building in Minnesota. The building has been remodeled several times since its erection about 1822. Several scenes of "Early Candlelight," Maud Hart Lovelace's novel, which will run serially in the Dispatch, took place there.

Below, Colonel Sweeney and Mrs. Lovelace. This photograph was taken last summer when the Third regiment held an honorary review for the author.

REVIEW OF THIRD INFANTRY
4:30 P. M. MAIN PARADE

RECEPTION
5:00 P. M. OFFICERS CLUB

Fort Snelling

DEEP pink rosebuds and sprays of yellow chrysanthemums adorned the tea table in the reception room of the Officers Club on Friday afternoon when a reception was given for Mrs. Maude Hart Lovelace of Lake Minnetonka and New York in honor of her splendid portrayal of early 'garrison life' at Fort Snelling in her recently published book, "Early Candlelight."

Mrs. Lovelace received a review and parade of the Third Infantry which was given in her honor. The tea and coffee services were presided over by Mes. Alden M. Graham and Bernard Lentz. Others assisting at the tea were Mes. Edwin B. Maynard, Emil F. Reinhardt, Emmet C. Morton, John J. Gorman, Frank J. Spettel, Lawrence L. Skinner and Orion L. Davidson.
