EXPLANATIONS:

1. REPORTING OF SALES AND CHARGE FOR (RETURNS):

Sales are reported on a NET basis, i.e., sales minus returns. When sales exceed returns, your account will show a credit. When returns exceed sales, the excess returns will appear in parentheses and a charge will be shown. For example: Regular Domestic Sales (100) @ .395 with $39.50 charged.

2. RESERVE AGAINST RETURNS:

To obtain maximum exposure and distribution for our books, we sell them to bookstores and wholesalers on a fully returnable basis. Consequently, sales made in one period may be returned for full credit in a subsequent period. Therefore, a reserve against returns may have been made and is so indicated at the bottom of this statement. This reserve is based on returns received during the three months following the cut-off date for this reporting period, plus our estimate of additional returns that may be received before our next reporting period.

1. REPORTING OF SALES AND CHARGE FOR (RETURNS):

Sales are reported on a NET basis, i.e., sales minus returns. When sales exceed returns, your account will show a credit. When returns exceed sales, the excess returns will appear in parentheses and a charge will be shown. For example: Regular Domestic Sales (100) @ .395 with $39.50 charged.

2. RESERVE AGAINST RETURNS:

To obtain maximum exposure and distribution for our books, we sell them to bookstores and wholesalers on a fully returnable basis. Consequently, sales made in one period may be returned for full credit in a subsequent period. Therefore, a reserve against returns may have been made and is so indicated at the bottom of this statement. This reserve is based on returns received during the three months following the cut-off date for this reporting period, plus our estimate of additional returns that may be received before our next reporting period.

1. REPORTING OF SALES AND CHARGE FOR (RETURNS):

Sales are reported on a NET basis, i.e., sales minus returns. When sales exceed returns, your account will show a credit. When returns exceed sales, the excess returns will appear in parentheses and a charge will be shown. For example: Regular Domestic Sales (100) @ .395 with $39.50 charged.

2. RESERVE AGAINST RETURNS:

To obtain maximum exposure and distribution for our books, we sell them to bookstores and wholesalers on a fully returnable basis. Consequently, sales made in one period may be returned for full credit in a subsequent period. Therefore, a reserve against returns may have been made and is so indicated at the bottom of this statement. This reserve is based on returns received during the three months following the cut-off date for this reporting period, plus our estimate of additional returns that may be received before our next reporting period.
