PERSONAL PROPERTY,
J. O'CONNOR.

His method was to call on a business man and ask to see some one in his employ after he had made sure that the man he asked for was out of the office. When told that the man was not in he would express disappointment and explain that the man asked for was his uncle; that he had a woman friend waiting for him and wanted to go to the theatre, but had not enough money. he would get sums ranging from $
