"Minnesota Illustrated --- Strangers and residents wishing to give their friends abroad an idea of the beauties of our lakes, the splendid business houses of our city, with views of the falls, the city, our manufactories, can do so by calling at the Postoffice News Stand. 'The Golden Northwest,' 'The Graphic --- Minneapolis and St. Paul editions,' 'North Star State,' 'Tourist and Sportsman,' 'The Park Region of the Northwest.' These publications ought to be distributed liberally by our citizens."

For Mr. Watson

"The Golden Northwest" is an illustrated edition of the lands owned by the Northern Pacific for the purpose of selling it. I see no value in this for Gazetteer. However it calls Bicker County "The Heart of U.W. Park Region".

Minnesota Is 'Clear Water,' Says Smithsonian's Book

A dictionary of American state names, some of which have origins quite different from those generally attributed to them, has been compiled by Dr. John O. Harrington, linguistic expert of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian Institution, it was announced today in Washington.

Here's Dr. Harrington's derivation of Minnesota:

Minnesota—determined to be a descriptive term in origin meaning "clear water" in contradistinction to the term meaning "riled water". The word first appears in printing in Janothan Carver, "Travels Through the Interior Parts of North America", London, 1778, in the spelling Minesoter. It was Gen. H. H. Sibley, who in 1848, first launched the spelling Minnesota. In 1849 this became officialized as the designation of Minnesota Territory.

Dr. Harrington's derivation of Dakota follows:

Dakota — A Siouan tribe name, occurring in dialects with "l" instead of "d" and meaning in origin "friend".

Iowa in origin is the name of the Iowa tribe of Indians meaning "putter to sleep".

Michigan is native Algonkian for "large clearing".
