Upham,22: Anoka. "City of Anoka" incorporated by legislature, July 29,1858, and later the "Borough of Anoka," March 5, 1869, but both these acts failed of acceptance by vote of the township. Under legislative act of March 2, 1878, the city was set off from the township of the same name. For origin and meaning of name, see Anoka Co. McCauley Map, Anoka 2: Anoka. On N.P. and G.N.r.r. It was decided to give it an Indian name. The Dakota Lexicon, just published, and of which I was the owner of a copy, was not infrequently consulted and at length the euphonious name Anoka was decided upon . . . it was said to mean 'on both sides' when rendered into less musical English..."

Goodrich, Anoka Co.,161: Columbus. Platted in spring of 1856 by James Starkey. Built a sawmill and hotel. Post office established in 1858, discontinued a few years later. "Twenty years later, only a few decaying logs in the brush and a cellar full of rubbish served to mark the spot."

Folsom, Fifty Years,447: Columbus. Not a vestige now remains.

Daily Minnesotian, Oct.30,1856,p.3,c.2: "Columbus, twenty-three miles north of St. Paul laid out by Messrs. Starkey and Pettys only a year ago, is not a very flourishing point."

Neill, Upper Miss. Valley (1881),273: In 1856 Gen. James Starkey, now of St. Paul, and a Mr. Pettis, commenced making improvements on sec.22, and the following year built a large steam sawmill. They also platted a village which they called Columbus, and built a number of dwellings. A large hotel was erected, and quite a settlement formed by the strenuous efforts of Starkey and Pettis, who lost a large amount of money in trying to sustain the village. About 1860 the mill burned and the village soon after disappeared... A P.O. was Manomin County Manomin Township	Upham,23: Fridley Township. A fractional township comprising only about 16 sq.mi. Established by legislature as Manomin County, on the same date (May 23, 1857) with the establishment of Anoka Co. "John Banfil settled in what is now Fridley in 1847, and kept a stopping place for the accommodation of travelers. 1849 Henry M. Rice acquired considerable land and built a country residence at Cold Springs.... A ferry across the Mississippi River was established about 1854." (Goodrich,162-163). Manomin Co. continued until 1869-70, when it was united with Anoka County as Manomin Township. In 1879 name changed to Fridley, for Abram M. Fridley (1817-1888), who came to Long Prairie in 1851 as agent for Winnebago Indians. Rep. in legislature in 1855, 1869-71, 1879. McCauley Map, Anoka 2: Fridley Township. Upham,24: A townsite platted and named in 1852 by Governor Ramsey and others. 1st P.O. in Anoka Co. established there and named Itasca in May, 1852. Name copied from Lake Itasca at the head of the Mississippi. It was later applied for many years to the N.P. r.r.station near the former Itasca village. Both the village and the r.r.station have been abandoned.

Sauk Rapids Frontierman, Apr.24, 1856, p.2,c.3: Itaska. From Anoka to Itaska 6 miles.

Winchell, Geol.Survey, 2:pl.45: Itasca.

Goodrich, Anoka County, 121: Itaska. Established May, 1852. The first post office in Anoka County was established here. The town dwindled after the attempt to move the Capitol here failed.

St. Paul Daily Press, July 17, 1863, p.1, c.2: Itasca, a settlement of five or six houses, has been entirely evacuated. Because of Indian scares.

Neill, Upper Miss Valley (1881),287: In 1852 the town site of Itasca was laid out on sec.19,30, not far from the present r.r.

station bearing the same name. The proprietors were Ramsey, Hatch, Beatty, and Wilkinson, who made some improvements and built a hotel, which was kept for a number of years by J.C. Bowers. For a time there was a fair prospect for a town of some importance, and an effort was made to secure the location of the state capital at this point. The removal of the Indians in 1856 took away the chief support of the village, and it gradually ceased to exist.

Gaz.Minn.Streams, 586: Rum River rises in Mille Lac Lake in Aitkin and Mille Lacs counties and flows south through lakes Ogechie, Nessawae and Onamia. Below this chain of lakes Rum River flows south, east and south, emptying into Mississippi River at Anoka. Its chief tributaries are Bradbury, Tibbetts, Bogus, Whitney, Spencer and Trott brooks and West Branch of Rum River. (Mississippi River Drainage.)

Upham, 348: The name of Rum river, which Carver in 1766 and Pike in 1805 found in use by English-speaking fur traders, was indirectly derived from the Sioux. Their name of Mille Lacs, Mde Wakan, translated Spirit lake, was given to its river, but was changed by the white men to the most common spirituous liquor brought into the Northwest, rum, which brought misery and ruin, to many of the Indians. The map of Long's expedition in 1823 has these names, Spirit lake and Rum river. Nicollet's map, published in 1843, has "Iskode Wabo or Rum R." this name given by the Ojibways; but derived by them from the white men's perversion of the ancient Sioux name Wakan, being in more exact translation "Fire Water." More frequently, as noted by Gilfillan, the Ojibway name for Rum river was taken from their name for the lake and meant simply the Great Lake river.

Description &
Name Origin

In 1853, a member of Isaac Stevens Railroad Survey Expedition describes travelling on the St. Anthony Road. "The country, for the first seven miles after leaving the Winnabago Indian Encampment (which lies on the west bank of Mississippi R.
3 miles above the Ram River) and striking the St. Anthony road, is a well prairie."

Lakes are connected by canals, ditches, and natural streams which, according to the contour lines, supply artificial and natural drainage for this lake dotted marsh area S + SE to Vadnais Lake. Pumping stations + artesian wells on the shores of Centerville, Baldwin, Wilkinson + Vadnais lakes indicate that this flowage is artificially encouraged toward Vadnais lake. The Conduit, with its northern end at the pumping station on Vadnais lake, goes south thru the western portion of New Canada township towards St. Paul.

While the map does not extend far enough to show it, it would seem logical to assume that all bodies of water connected directly or indirectly with Vadnais lake supplies in part water to the City of St. Paul.

The interlocking artificial drainage system which eventually ends in Vadnais lake would indicate the presence of some drainage feature which takes care of the surplus water in this rather poorly drained area. The lakes thus interconnected are:

Description & Name Origin The name was taken from the town of Anoka, which was first settled in 1851-52, and was named in 1853. It is a Dakota or Sioux word meaning, as Prof. A. W. Williamson wrote, "on both sides"; applied by founders to the city laid out on both sides of Rum river and since applied to the county." of which this city is the county seat. Rev. Moses N. Adams, who came as a missionary to the Sioux in 1848 and learned their language, stated that as a Sioux word, Anoka means "the other side, or both sides." According to the late R. I. Holcombe and others, including Albert M. Goodrich, the historian of this county, the Ojibways also sometimes used a name of nearly the same sound for the Rum river and for the site of Anoka near its mouth, meaning "where they work" on account of the extensive lumbering and log-driving on this stream. The Ojibway verb, "I work" is Anoki, as given in Baraga's Dictionary, with many inflected forms and compound words from this root, all referring to work in some way as their central thought.

But the selection of the name Anoka had reference only to its use by the Dakota or Sioux people, whose language is wholly unlike that of the Ojibways. A newspaper article on this subject, written in 1873 by L. M. Ford, is quoted by Goodrich as follows: "The name for the new town was a topic of no little interest, and the writer had something to do in its selection. It was decided to give it an Indian name. The Dakota Lexicon, just published, and of which I was the owner of a copy, was not infrequently consulted and at length the euphonious name Anoka was decided upon...It was said to mean 'on both sides,' when rendered into less musical English, and to this day the name is by no means inappropriate, as the town is growing up and extending on either side of the beautiful but badly named river."
