Description & Name Origin named in honor of Jean Baptiste Faribault, who was engaged during the greater part of his long life as a trader among the Sioux at first for the Northwest Fur Co. He was born at Berthier, Province of Quebec in 1774, and came to the Northwest in 1798, taking charge of a trading post on the Kankakee river near the south end of Lake Michigan. During the years 1799 to 1802, he was stationed at the Redwood post, situated on the Des Moines river, "about 200 miles above its mouth," being in what is now the central part of Iowa. Coming to Minnesota in 1803, he took charge of a post at Little Rapids, on the Minnesota river a few miles above the present sites of Chaska and Carver, where he remained several years. afterward he was a trader on his own account at Prairie du Chien, Wis.; whence he removed to Pike island, at the mouth of the Minnesota river, in the spring of 1820, having been promised military protection by Colonel Leavenworth, who had come there with troops in the preceding August for building the fort which in 1825 was named Fort Snelling. After 1826 Faribault and his family lived in Mendota, having built there a substantial stone house, the first (1837?) in Minnesota, and in the winters during many years he traded with the Sioux at Little Rapids. His influence with the Indian tribes west of the Mississippi, from the Missouri to the Red river, was very great. He endeavored to teach them agriculture, and was the first white settler to cultivate the soil in this state. He spent his last years in the town of Faribault, in Rice county, founded, at first as an Indian trading post, by his eldest son, Alexander Faribault, for whom it was named. He died at the home of his daughter there, August 29, 1860.

An appreciative memoir of him, by Gen. Henry H. Sibley, in the M.H.S. Coll. (vol. III, p 168-179), closes with these words: "Among the pioneers of Minnesota, there are none whose memory and whose name better deserve to be respected and perpetuated."
