	Minneapoilis Sunday Tribune, March 17, 1946; Women's section, p. 13: When the village was incorporated in 1888, the walls of the old Grange hall echoed with harsh words cast about with abandon when it came to the choice of a name. Many of the Irish held out for Killarney Lakes. Waterville Mill was another favorite. So, too, were Nana, Westfield and Hennepin Park. Edina was the dark horse suggested by Henry F. Brown. Arguments got hotter as the choice narrowed. When Killarney Lakes and Edina came to a deadlock, someone suggested that the voting be delayed until another time. According to one version this was agreed upon, and some of the Killarney faction left. Then a vote was hurriedly taken, and Edina lined up 47 to Killarney's 42 in one record and 56 to 54 in another. However, bitterness must have been forgotten, because old timers today who attended that meeting recall little friction.

Upham, 226, 227: St. Anthony Falls platted as a village in 1849. Included in Ramsey County until March 4, 1856. An act of the legislature consolidating the cities of St. Anthony and Minneapolis, and incorporating the same into one city by the name of Minneapolis, was approved February 28, 1872.

St. Anthony Express, Sept. 3, 1853, p.2,c.3: Above the city [St. Anthony City] is the Town of St. Anthony Falls, fronting on the Mississippi river, a fraction over a mile and running back seven blocks. The streets running parallel with the river are Main, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh; those ar right angles are Birch, Willow, Aspen, Spring, Maple, Walnut, Spruce, Cedar, Pine, Mill, Bay, Oak and Linden. The town was laid out by Messrs Steele and Taylor....Adjoining the Town of St. Anthony Falls is Steele & Russell's addition to the Town of St. Anthony, having a front on the river of 385 feet and running back about a mile,the only street in thi addition is Dacotah, running from the river, the streets in the town of St. Anthony proper intersecting the same. Addition laid out 1848.

OVER

St. Paul Press, Jan. 9, 1866, p.4,c.7: St. Anthony. 50 citizens met to discuss the question of union with Minneapolis.

St. Anthony Express, Sept. 3, 1853, p.2,c.3: Next and above this addition (addition to Town of St. Anthony Falls) is what is called the original town of St. Anthony, recorded by H. M. Rice in October, 1849, extending along the river about 1/3 mile. The streets running parallel with the river are Water, Marshall, etc....Above the town of St. Anthony are Bottineau's and Northup's addition, and in the rear Pierre Choteau & Co. and Marshall's addition.

St. Paul Press, Jan. 31, 1866, p.4,c.6: Last evening the two committees came to a definite agreement to unite the communities of Minneapolis and St. Anthony....

Cheevertown	Upham, 226: St. Anthony City. Comprised the site of the state university and the adjoining area southeastward. Named for the Falls of St. Anthony. Platted 1848-49. Incorporated as a city March 3, 1855. Later was popularly called Cheevertown for William A. Cheever, a pioneer who settled there in 1847. St. Anthony Express, Sept. 3, 1853, p.2,c.3: St. Anthony City. Approaching St. Anthony from St. Paul, about seven miles from the latter place, you come to St. Anthony City, lying on the Miss. River about 7/8 miles in front, and running back about six blocks from the river. The blocks contain about 2 1/2 acres each. It's proprietor is William A. Cheever. The plat was recorded in January, 1849. St. Anthony Express, Jan. 3, 1852, p.2,c.3,4: The present situation of St. Anthony City is nearly due south of St. Anthony and joining that village. It is nearly half a mile below the Falls of St. Anthony, and belongs for the most part to William A. Cheever.

Upham, 227: Wayzata. N. side of Wayzata Bay. Platted 1854; incorp. 1884. Name formed by a slight change from Waziyata, a Dakota word meaning "at the pines, the north." Wazi is defined as "a pine, a pines"; and Waziya, "the northern god, or god of the north;" the suffix ta denotes "at, to, on." (Riggs' Dictionary, 192,239). The name Wayzata, originated by white men, refers to the location, at the n. side of the e. end of Lake Minnetonka, not to pine trees.

The legislature of 1866-67 did nominally change the name of the town of Wayzata to Freeport, but the latter name was distasteful to the inhabitants of the town, never came into general use, and the Legislature last winter wiped it out and restored the name of Wayzata.

Description & Name Origin Name used by Mrs. Mary H. Eastman in introduction to her Dakotah: "The Indians call them Mine-hah-hah, or laughing waters." The common Sioux word for waterfall is "ha-ha" To join the words Minne, water, and ha-ha, seems to be a suggestion of white man, which thereafter came to into use among the Indians.

Not on Map

Newson, Indian Legends, Minn. Lakes, 1881, Pg. 1:

Falls of Minnehaha. Name means Laughing Water

Waters." The common Sioux word for waterfall is "haha", which they applied in general to any waterfall or cascade. To join the words "minne", water, and "haha", a fall, seems to be a suggestion of white men, which thereafter came into use among the Indians.

Soon this Sioux or Dakota name took its present form, an improvement devised by white people, probably first published in Mrs. Eastmans book, in 1849. It was more elaborately presented by Rev. John A. Merrick, in a paper published by William G. Le Duc in the Minnesota Year Book for 18 5-. Merrick wrote: "By the Dakota or Sioux Indians they are called Minne-ha-hah or Minne-ra-ra (Laughing Water, and also Minne-owah (Falling Water) general expressions applied to all water falls; but par eminence Minne-ha-hah Donk-ah (the great laughing water). By the Ojibways they are termed Kakah-Bikah (the broken rocks)"

Description & Name Origin Organized as Twp. May 11, 1858. Transformed in 1886 to village organizations of Golden Valley + St. Louis Park, except E. part of twp, which had been comprised in the city area, 1856 authorized town govt. with a council, which was inaugurated July 20, 1858, first election of officers Feb. 19, 1867. Enlarged by union of former cities of Minneapolis and St. Anthony by legislative act Feb. 28, 1872, + new city council organized Apr. 9, 1872.

Name recommended by Charles Hoag to editor of St. Anthony Express, George H. Bowman, Nov. 5, 1852. Bowman advocated its adoption in following issues of the Express. Soon the name, compounded from the Greek "polis", city, and Minnehaha, displaced the various earlier names that had attained more or less temporary acceptance.

Feb. 28, 187x, and the new city Council was organized April 9, 187x.
The earliest announcement and recommendation of this name was brought by Charles Hoag to the editor of the St. Anthony Express, George D. Bowman, on the day of its publication, Nov. 5, 185x. It was then published, without time for editorial comment, which was very favorably given in the next issue, on Nov. 1x. Soon this new name, compounded from Minnehaha and the Greek "polis", city, displaced the various earlier names which had attained more or less temporary acceptance.
The distinguished parts borne by both Hoag and Bowman in this opportune coinage of the name Minneapolis have been many times related, with gratitude to Hoag for the bright idea and to Bowman for his effective advocacy of it by his newspaper.

Description & Name Origin Stevens was the first to plat lots on the original site of city. The State legislature, in an act approved March 1, 1856, authorized a town government with a council, which was inaugurated July 20, 1858. Its first election of officers was held February 19, 1867. It was enlarged, through union of the former cities of Minneapolis and St. Anthony, by a legislative act approved February 28, 1872, and the new city council was organized April 9, 1872.

The earliest announcement and recommendation of this name was brought by Charles Hoag to the editor of the St. Anthony Express, George D. Bowman, on the day of its publication, November 5, 1852. It was then published, without time for editorial comment, which was very favorably given in the next issue, on November 12. Soon this new name, compounded from Minnehaha and the Greek "polis," city, displaced the various earlier names which had attained more or less temporary acceptance, including All Saints, proposed by James M. Goodhue of the Minnesota Pioneer, Hennepin, Lowell, Brooklyn, Albion, and others.

The distinguished parts borne by both Hoag and Bowman in this opportune coinage of the name Minneapolis have been many times related, with gratitude to Hoag for the bright idea and to Bowman for his effective advocacy of it by his newspaper.

But a new claim, for the origination of the name by Bowman during a horseback ride from St. Anthony to Marine Mills, on the St. Croix river, was published in the summer of 1915 by a posthumous letter of Benjamin Drake, Sr., a cousin of Bowman, printed on page 1583 in Volume III of the late Captain Henry A. Castle's History of Minnesota. The circumstantial evidences of truthfulness there shown for Bowman, as the first to receive the inspiration of uniting "Minnehaha" and "polis" to form this city name, seem quite conclusive.

It is probable, however, that Bowman had mentioned this idea to his friend, Mr. Hoag, and that some days or weeks later, when Hoag had entirely forgotten this, it may have come again to his mind and been thought new and original with himself, immediately before his writing the short article by which this name was proposed in November, 1852.

So each of these excellent early citizens of Minneapolis may have honestly believed himself the favored first originator of the city's name. They worked together unselfishly and successfully for its adoption, and they seem equally deserving of enduring fame for this service to the young city.

The claims for each are quite fully stated and discussed in the Minneapolis Journal, by Hon. John B. Gilfillan, January 7, 1917, and by the present writer a week later, On January 14.

Official records show residents of the west part of the original town voted to secede and establish a separate village Oct. 12, 1888, and the new village was incorporated and named Edina December 12, that year. Population of the new village was about evenly divided between persons of Irish and Scotch descent and, in the two months between the secession and incorporation, the two factions wrangled bitterly over a name.

"The Scots wanted 'EDINA' (a contraction of Edinburgh used by Robert Burns, Scotch poet, in his 'Address to Edinburgh') which had been the name of the mill* for a number of years. Irish partisans held out for 'Killarney Lakes.' Several compromise names were suggested, including 'Westfield,' 'Waterville Mill' (original name of the mill) and 'Hennepin Park.'

"The controversy became so intense, according to one version of the story, that a town meeting broke up in fisticuffs and the Scotch adopted 'EDINA' at a separate meeting after the Irish had gone home.

"'There was some argument all right, but the Scotch didn't put anything over on us Irish --- why I voted for "Edina" myself,' Delaney insists.

/Mr./ Code says: 'There were two meetings -- I was at both of them.'

"While Delaney and Code have lived in Edina longer than anyone else, they are not the community's oldest residents. Mrs. George Millam, 4916 France avenue S., widow of a former miller at Edina mill, is 89 years old. Mrs. Millam has lived in Edina since 1872."

* - "The old Edina mill, which stood until a few years ago at the dam near the present Edina school, was an important institution in the boyhood of James T. Delaney and William E. Code. They hauled grain from their farms to the mill to be ground into flour and meal for sale and use at home. 'We were raised on flour and oatmeal from that mill,' Delaney explained, 'and we always were proud of the fact the first rolled oats made in this part of the country came from the Edina mill.'"

(Grinding stones from the old mill now decorate the entrance of Edina Grange hall, which has become a village historical museum and community hall.)

Description & Name Origin commemorates Louis Hennepin, the Franciscan missionary, explorer, and author, who was born in Ath, Belgium, about 1640, and died in Holland about 1701.....The next year (1675) he sailed to Canada, in the same ship with Laval, the bishop of the newly established see of Quebec, and La Salle, destined to be the greatest French explorer of the New World, arriving in Quebec in September. In 1678 Hennepin joined La Salle's expedition for exploration of Lakes Ontario, Erie, Huron, and Michigan, and the Illinois and Mississippi rivers.

By direction of La Salle, whom he left near the site of Peoria, Hennepin descended the Illinois river with two companiens in a canoe, and thence ascended the Mississippi. On their way up the Mississippi they were captured by a band of Sioux, living near Mille Lacs, spent 8 months with them, and were rescued by Du Luth, who enabled Hennepin to reach Green Bay. In the midsummer of 1680, ~~after the early part of their captivity~~.....Hennepin and one of his French companions, Anthony Auguelle (also called the Pickard du Gay), were the first white men to see the Falls of St. Anthony, which Hennepin named in honor of his patron saint, Anthony of Padua.

.....In 1683 he published in Paris an account of his explorations, entitled "Description de la Louisiane." A translation of it, by John Gilmary Shea, was published in New York in 1880, with dedication to Archbishop Ireland and John Fletcher Williams, who were respectively the president and secretary of the Minnesota Historical Society.....

Two hundred years after Hennepin visited and named the falls of the Mississippi at the center of the present city of Minneapolis, a great celebration was held there by the M.H.S. and the people of the Twin Cities.....

The name of Hennepin, instead of Snelling, which latter had been proposed by Colonel John H. Stevens in the original bill, was adopted for this county on request of Martin McLeod, member of the Territorial Council.

Name Origin & Remark: The earliest recorded exploration of this lake by white men was in 1822 by Joseph R. Brown and William Joseph Snelling. From their description, Keating, with Long's expedition in 1823, mentioned the lake, but it was not named nor shown on Long's map. Was not shown on Nicollet's map, 1843. Simon Stevens and Calvin A. Tuttle explored the lower part of the lake in April, 1852. Minnetonka was coined by Gov. Ramsey in May, 1852, when he made a journey there in May, 1852, accompanied by several prominent citizens of St. Paul + St. Anthony. Means "big water". Minne, or mini, is the Sioux word for water, and tonka, or tanka, is the word for big or great.

Description & Name Origin In the chapter on this township (Minnetonka), contributed by Judge Henry G. Two days after their return, the St. Anthony Express, for April 16, published an article entitled "Peninsula Lake," in which it is truly remarked that "almost the entire shore appears to be a succession of bays and peninsulas."

The present .... name was coined .... by Governor Alexander Ramsey, when near the end of May (1852), he made a journey to this lake in a company of several prominent citizens from St. Anthony and St. Paul. An article by Goodhue in his newspaper, the Minnesota Pioneer, for July 1, says: "The lake was named by Governor Ramsey, Minnetonka, or 'Big Water,' who expressed great admiration of the beauties of the country surrounding."

Minne (also spelled mini) is the common Sioux word for water, and tonka (also spelled tanka) is likewise their common word meaning big or great: but the name thus compounded seems not to have been used by the Sioux till Ramsey coined it for the lake. So far as we have records, indeed, the Sioux or Dakota people appear to have had no term for this large and many-featured body of water.

Description & Name Origin The northern part of Crystal Lake (twp) was once called Farmersville, embracing the three northern tiers of sections of the township. Previous to the establishment of Farmersville, two of the four tiers of sections which now constitute the town of Crystal Lake, belonged to the town of Brooklyn, and two to the town of Minneapolis. The town of Farmersville was set apart by the county commissioners July 8th, 1858, by taking two tiers of sections from Brooklyn and one from Minneapolis. At a subsequent meeting this action was re-considered and Farmersville was never organized, but lapsed, and the boundaries remained as established April 10th, 1858. In 1860, Crystal Lake was formed, by taking two tiers of sections from Brooklyn and two from Minneapolis

Name Origin & Remarks "In a column of 'State News' published yesterday, we find the following bit of intelligence: 'The town of Wayzata is now named...Freeport.' The above would be correct if it were ture. The Legislature of 1866-7 did nominally change the name of the town of Wayzata to Freeport, but the latter name was distasteful to the inhabitants of the town, never came into general use, and the (over)

Legislature last winter wiped it out and restored the name of Wayzata.

'Rip Van' should confine himself to...matters with which he is conversant though it will do no particular harm to let him rip."

Early in the summer of 1855, the excellent water-power upon the Crow River, on section 13, attracted the notice of Harvey S. Norton, and suggested the founding of a village there. He accordingly employed a surveyor, and laid out a town plat of fair proportions, and decided to name it Hassan, if it was ever born. But it never was; and the name remained unused until the following year, when the establishment of a post office, furnished an object to which it has since attached."

Carver County has a township named Chanhassen. Not to conflict with that name, the syllable meaning tree was here omitted.

Description & Name Origin Owned by Foster, Bradbury & Co., situated in the southwestern suburbs of Minneapolis. They discharge into the valley of Bassett's creek. The water is lined by a gray clay which underlies the peat soil of the region. The character of this water resembles that of the St. Anthony Falls mineral springs, except in the absence of organic matter. This difference may be owing to the absence of marshy land through which it caused to drained, comparable to the marsh which intervenes between the St. Anthony Falls Springs and the supposed source of the water.

Name Origin & Remarks: Name selected by vote of settlers at date of organization. Co. Hist., 1881, p. 260 says it was named from Minne, meaning waters, and trista, meaning crooked, from the fact that the town contained so many crooked lakes. Upham says "to be more definite," it was chosen primarily in allusion to the very irregular outline of Whale Tail Lake. Minnetrista is partly of Dakota derivation, in its first half; but trista is not found in either the Dakota or Ojibway languages. It is an example of words coined by white men, as if used by Indians.

Description & Name Origin

"The rocky formations at St Anthony Falls were arranged in the following order, from the surface downward. A coarse kind of limestone in thin strata containing considerable silex; a kind of soft friable stone of a greenish color and slaty fracture probably containing lime, aluminum and silex; a very beautiful stratification of shell limestone, in thin plates extremely regular in its formation and containing a vast number of shells, all apparently of the same kind. This formation constitutes the "Table Rock" of the cataract." [map. S. H. Long.

FINAL NOTE on Bette Davis: Out at Abbott hospital was a little girl, Barbara Lee, stepdaughter of Phil Mushkatin. Barbara Lee had been bedded for eight weeks. She dropped Miss Davis a note inviting her up. Miss Davis went, spent 15 minutes with the nine-year-old and the day of her departure sent a big batch of flowers and a pumpkin to the little girl . . . Lake Calhoun originally carried the name of Lake Mendoza . . . Advance telephone calls to the Orpheum theater (as good a barometer of business as Bill Sears knows) indicate that Jimmy Dorsey and his band, coming this Friday may very handily break the house records. Dorsey, mainly because of his juke-box appeal, is rated by many as the nation's No. 1 aggregation today.

Taken from the U.S. Soil Survey. 1929. #24
U.S. Dept. of Agr. Bureau of Chemistry and Soil.

Hennepin County was organized March 6, 1852. It was named for Louis Hennepin, a Franciscan priest, who ascended Mississippi river as far as the Falls of St. Anthony in 1680. His visit seems to have been the first made by any white man to the country included in the present county. It was not until 1819 that any settlement of civilized people was made, and then only a garrison of United States troops under the command of Colonel Leavenworth, who had orders to take command of the fort which was located on the site now occupied by Fort Snelling but was then known as Fort St. Anthony.

Cultivation of the land was not begun until about 1823, and then on only a very small scale by some Swiss colonists who came down Minnesota River from the north and were allowed to settle on the reservation at the fort. Here they established little farms and grew vegetables and grains for the use of the garrison. The first land brought under cultivation outside of the fort was near Lake Calhoun in 1830. Here an Indian colony was established with the permission of a Government Indian agent, and a large tract of land was devoted to the production of corn and wheat. Across the Mississippi River, in a small settlement which later became the town of St. Anthony, incorporated as a city in 1855, with a population of 2,000, Franklin Steele was the first settler who engaged in agriculture on a small scale. The land on the west side of the river, a part of the military reservation, was thrown open to squatters in 1854. The population in that year was estimated at 200, and the name of Minneapolis was given to the town. By 1857, the population had increased to more than 2,000, and in 1866 the town was incorporated as a city. The two cities, St Anthony on the east side of the river and Minneapolis on the west side, were united in 1872, retaining the name of Minneapolis.

From this time, actual settlement of the farm lands of the county began in ernest and steadily increased hereafter. The period between 1860 and 1870 was marked by a large influx of settlers, the population of the county, outside of Mpls, being 19,300 in 1860 and 18,500 in 1870. Since that time the growth in the rural population has been substantial, the population of the county in 1930 was 517,785, of which 33,976 were rural. Of the rural population 16,733 were classed as rural farm, and 17,243 as rural nonfarm.

Foreign nations most largely represented in in the population are, Sweden, Norway, Canada, Russia, Poland, Germany, and England. Of the 3,981 farms in 1930, owners operated 3,021, managers 79, and tenants 881.

Minneapolis, the county seat of Hennepin County and the largest city in the State, is located in the east-central part of the county at the site of St. Anthony Falls on the Mississippi River. Its business district lies about 10 miles west of that of St. Paul, the capital of the State, and about 18 miles west of St. Croix River, the boundary between Minnesota and Wisconsin. In 1930 it had a population of 464,356 and in 1920, 380,582, a gain in the 10 year period of more than 22 per cent. Minneapolis is an important railroad and manufacturing center and it is the principal distributing center for the Northwest. During 1930 the freight received and forwarded at Minneapolis by the railroads was more than 566,000 carloads of merchandise and produce. Minneapolis is nationally known as a city possessing unusual natural scenic beauty. It is dotted with beautiful lakes, most of which are embraced within a comprehensive park system. It is the seat of the University of Minnesota. Adjacent to the southern city limits is Fort Snelling, a Government military post occupying about 1,500 acres and lying at the apex of the angle formed by the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers.

(4) Besides Minneapolis, there are a number of incorporated towns. The county is adequately supplied with good railroad facilities, 10 trunk-line railroads, 4 of which are transcontinental, operating into Minneapolis. Minneapolis is at the head of river navigation on the Mississippi. Regular service is maintained to and from St. Louis, Mo., during the navigation season. The city maintains a municipal airport and is served by air mail, air express, and air-transportation service. The Lake Minnetonka district and other suburban districts are served by bus. A system of well-maintained highways, many of which are paved, radiate from Minneapolis in all directions. All the villages and suburban cities are connected by hard-surfaced, graveled, or good dirt roads. Schools and churches are conveniently located and telephone service is available to all parts of the county. Local and transcontinental bus and truck lines have terminals in Minneapolis.

Many industrial manufacturing plants are located in Minneapolis and in the adjacent villages, producing nearly 900 different commodities, many of which are distributed widely throughout the Nation and in foreign countries. In Minneapolis alone, more than 40,000 persons are employed in factories. Some of the important products manufactured are flour and other grain-mill products; linseed oil cake, and meal; cloth bags; furniture; structural and ornamental iron and steel; paints; rotary pumps; road machinery; electrical machinery; apparatus, and supplies; and manufacturing machines of various kinds.

(5) Minneapolis is the largest flour-producing center in the world, its mills having a daily capacity of 53,150 barrels. The grain-storage capacity is more than 9,000,000 bushels.

PLAT INCORP

Description & Name Origin In 1849 Col. J. H. Stevens, by permission of the Government, settled on its site, and built the first dwelling house. It was first called all Saints, then Lowell, Albion, and finally the present name was adopted. It is made up of the Sioux word Minne, water, and the Greek word polis, city. (over)

The financial crisis of 1857 checked it for four or five years, when it again grew rapidly.

manner that the name was adopted.

In the years 1865 and 1866, attempts were made to unite this place with St. Anthony, under a common name and government, but the two towns failing to agree on a name, the project was abandoned.

At an early date, a village charter had been obtained, but for several years its only government was a township organization.

The wire suspension bridge here is the only structure of its kind west of Cincinnati, and the only one crossing the Mississippi river.

Description & Name Origin Minneapolis has been called the "saw dust" city, from her lumbering industries, and the "city of mills" from her large number of flouring and grist mills. The name of the city is most appropriate being derived from the Indian and Greek words "Minni" signifying water, and "polis", city, or "City of waters"; for to her water power is due her importance as a manufacturing Metropolis.
