Description & Name Origin The Ojibway translation on Nicolet's map was Kagiwigwan, & Gagagiwigwuni by Gilfillan, who would preferably translate it, following Schoolcraft, as "Raven Feather river." Pike in 1805 & Schoolcraft in 1820 & 1832 used the French name of this river, de Corbeau, meaning, 'of the Raven', but its more complete name in French was rivière à l'île de Corbeau, river of the Wing of the Raven, as translated by the voyageurs & traders from the Ojibwa name. In the "Summary Narrative" published in 1855, Schoolcraft referred to the somewhat erroneous English translation Crow Wing river, as follows: "The Indian name of this river is Kagivegwon, or Raven's Wing or Quill, which is accurately translated by the term île de Corbeau, but it is improperly called Crow Wing. The Chippewa term for crow is andaiq, & the French, COU

cornelle, - terms which are appropriately applied to another stream, nearer St.
Anthony Falls."

Another version "Where the river joins the Mississippi was an island in the shape of a crow's wing, which gave the name to the river & the town."

This is the largest branch of the Mississippi above Little falls. The unnumbered affluents which unite to compose the main stream, head in lakes & marshes of Hubbard, Becker, Ottertail, Wadena and Todd counties, having received most of its tributaries and coursed through Wadena. The river for a short distance separates Todel. from Cass. Co. and then runs between Cass & monvion counties to empty opposite the town of Cowwing.

Description & Name Origin named in honor of William and Allan Morrison. The older of these brothers, William, was born in Montreal, March 7, 1785, and died on Morrison's island, near Sorel, Canada, August 7, 1866. He entered the service of the XY fur company in 1802, coming to Grand Portage, Leech Lake, and the headwaters of Crow Wing river. From 1805 to 1816 he was engaged here for a new company formed by the coalition of the XY and Northwest companies. Later, through 10 years, he was in service of the American Fur Co., under John Jacob Astor, and established a series of trading posts on or near the northern boundary of Minnesota from Grand Portage west to the Lake of the Woods. In 1826 he retired, and afterward lived in Canada. During his journeys as a fur trader he explored a large region of northern Minnesota. In 1804 he visited Lake Itasca, then called

Lac La Biche or Elk lake, thus long preceding Schoolcraft in the discovery of the source of the Mississippi, as is related by Hon. J. V. Brower in Volume VII of the M. N. S. Collections, with publication of the full text of a letter on this subject, which William Morrison wrote to his brother Allan, January 9, 1856. This letter was forwarded to Governor Ramsey, then president of the Historical Society, a few days before the act was passed establishing this country.

Allan Morrison, who is also commemorated by this name, was born at Terrebonne, near Montreal, June 3, 1803, and died at White Earth, Minn., November 21, 1877. He came to Fond du Lac and northern Minnesota, in the fur trade, associated with his brother, William, in 1820; had charge of trading posts at Sandy Lake, Leech Lake, Red Lake, and Mille Lacs; was the first trader at Crow Wing, continuing there many years; and finally removed in 1874 to the White Earth reservation. He was a representative in the first territorial legislature.
