Description & Name Origin A state highway marker commemorating the stockade built at Maine Prairie during the Sioux War of 1862 was dedicated near its site on June 20, 1931. The marker bears the following inscription: "Word of the Sioux outbreak reached Maine Prairie as named by its settlers of 1856 about Aug. 19, 1862. After forming a volunteer militia company, a stockaded log fort, some 40 ft. square was hastily built just west of this point. Some skirmishes occurred but the fort itself was not attacked."

Description & Name Origin: Tributary to the Mississippi from the west about 5 mi. n. of St. Cloud. Watab is the Ojibway word for the long and very slender roots of both the tamarack and the jack pine, which were dug by the Indians, split and used as threads in sewing their birch bark canoes. Both these coniferous trees grow on or near the lower Watab River. [over]

Rev. F. W. Smith, an Ojibway pastor, of Red Lake Agency, informed the present writer in 1885 that in n. Minn. the Ojibways principally use the roots of the jack pine as watab, although the roots of both tamarack and arbor vitae are also somewhat used. The name of this river and township doubtless refers to the jack pines there, this being at the s. w. limit of that species, whereas the geographic range of the tamarack extends considerably farther south and west.

• Named for jack pines growing near its mouth. The long and slender roots of this pine, as also of the tamarack, were called watab by the Ojibways and were used for sewing their birch bark canoes. In the treaty of 1825 at Prairie du Chien, this river was designated as a part of the boundary agreed upon as a dividing line between the country of the Ojibways and that of the Sioux.

Description & Name Origin was named for Hon. Charles Thomas Stearns, member of the Council of the Territorial Legislature, 1854 and 1855. The name, however, was decided by a mistake, told in the "History of the Upper Mississippi Valley," as follows: "The bill, as originally introduced, bore the name of Stevens county, in honor of Governor Stevens, then prominently connected with the survey of the Northern Pacific railroad and passed both branches of the Legislature in that shape; but in the enrollment of the bill the change occurred from Stevens to Stearns and when discovered, it was concluded best to let the matter stand, as the name was still in the line of honorable mention, and Mr. Stearns well entitled to public recognition in this way."

Stearns was born in Pittsfield, Mass., January 9, 1807; came from Illinois to Minnesota in 1849, and first settled in St. Anthony; thence removed in 1855 to St. Cloud, the county seat of Stearns county, where he was proprietor of a hotel during 14 years; and about the year 1870, having sold his hotel to be one of the buildings of the State Normal School, he removed to Mobile, Ala. Later he resided in New Orleans, La., and died there May 22, 1898. He was the last survivor of the founders of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Minnesota.
