If you don't want to use the violation petition to [REDACTED] than I think I should be representing myself on the violation petition, as I'm confident that [REDACTED] [REDACTED] will resolve all the issues that I believe exist.

Dear Mr. Rotondo:

[REDACTED]

Upon reflecting on your recent email, I think you should consider either representing yourself or consulting with another attorney for a second opinion with regard to your violation petition, any modifications to your custody/visitation order that you may wish to pursue, as well as your hopes to gain custody of a child who is not biologically yours. I only say this because since I have been assigned to represent you, you do not seem to be particularly interested in following the guidance of a legal professional according to the actual, established law that governs these issues.

I remain available to assist you in any way that I legally, ethically can, as I have been assigned to do, upon my return to my office on April 24th. Please consider the above during my absence and advise as to how you would like to proceed so that I may request that the Court relieve me as your attorney of record, if that is what you wish for me to do. I hope that this message finds you well and look forward to hearing you. Have a good holiday.

Why don't you ask to be relieved before you go on vacation, and ask the court to notify me of its decision by mail or by phone if desired, as you will be unavailable on your vacation and there are deadlines in the meantime.

Also, being off my case will likely make your vacation more enjoyable.

My intention was to be comically obtuse with that last comment.

Hi Mike. I am already on the road but I do have a laptop with me and will have access to email. Please think this over through the weekend and let's touch base early next week on any correspondence going into the Court. And just to be clear, I do not have any problem with you or your case. To the contrary, I enjoyed our spirited discussion when we were able to meet and discuss it in some detail. I just want you to have legal representation that you are pleased with, and that may not happen unless you have a professional second opinion or, alternatively, are able to have faith that I am leading down a legally sound path to get the best result possible, given the facts and the controlling law.

I will check in with you early next week.

Okay Mike, I'll send a letter into Referee Pavone at my earliest opportunity, within the next 24 hours, and will copy you by email.
