Meet Layla

Big Brain, Bigger Heart

BY KIM HALL | LAKE MARTIN ANIMAL SHELTER

Layla is a gorgeous 2 year old Belgian Malinois/German Shepherd mix with a big brain, big energy, and an even bigger heart. Kennel life is tough on her - she's an active girl who needs room to move and a family who understands her working-breed drive.

She's wonderful with kids, selective with dogs, and absolutely not a fan of cats. What she wants most is space, structure, and someone who sees her potential.

If you're looking for a loyal, athletic partner who's eager to shine, Layla is waiting.

Stars, Stripes, and Lake Martin Nights

Summer is in full swing, and there is no finer place to celebrate it than right here on the shores of Lake Martin. We hope your hearts (and your boats) are ready for the festivities ahead.

We are especially excited to welcome back the Lake Martin Songwriters Festival, July 23rd-26th. This beloved tradition brings world-class singer-songwriters to our lakeside stages for a weekend of intimate, soul-stirring performances.

Then, on the evening of July 4th, don't miss the annual Independence Day Concert and Fireworks Spectacular at the AMP on Lake Martin. Live music followed by a breathtaking fireworks display launched right over the water. It is the highlight of summer for good reason; we hope to see you there.

July is packed with fun for the whole family. Be sure to flip to the Calendar of Events section for a full listing of activities, socials, and ways to make the most of this wonderful summer month.

From our families to yours, Happy 4th of July, and enjoy every moment on this beautiful lake.

THE OAKS COLLABORATIVE
CULTIVATING CHRIST-CENTERED RELATIONSHIPS

Helping Students Find Their People, Place, and Purpose

BY ABBY DEWBERRY

Each fall, thousands of students arrive on campus carrying more than just boxes and backpacks. They bring questions, hopes, and a quiet search for where they belong. For many in the Auburn area, that search begins before classes ever start, through a weekend designed to ground them in something deeper.

The heart behind Oaks Collaborative is simple but intentional: root students in faith, surround them with community, and help them step into college with clarity and purpose.

Founded by Trace Hamiter in 2012 through a collaboration of local churches and campus ministries in the area to welcome incoming freshmen and transfer students, The Oaks Collaborative is now a registered 501(c)(3) nonprofit, partnering with local churches and campus ministries across the country to host Christ-centered, three-day retreats for 4,000 incoming freshmen and transfer students. This year, there are 25 retreats across the country scheduled late July through the end of August.

But what makes it unique isn't just its size. It's who leads it.

The retreats are almost entirely student-driven. Around 1,500 upperclassmen will step into leadership roles as counselors, small group leaders, and mentors this summer, giving up their own time to invest in students they've never met.

"Our ministry oversees systems and infrastructure," Hamiter explains, "but it's really student-powered. It's a strong student leadership team, and student counselors are the ones sacrificing of their own time because they want to invest in those freshmen."

Over the course of the weekend, students gather for worship, small group conversations, and shared experiences that help break down the awkwardness of those first college days. The goal is not just a meaningful weekend. It's a lasting foundation.

Students leave with friendships formed, connections to local churches and ministries, and a clearer sense of how they want to live out their faith during college.

That sense of purpose is rooted in the organization's guiding verse from Isaiah 61:3, calling students to become "oaks of righteousness." It's a picture of strength, stability, and growth, qualities that don't happen overnight, but begin with intentional roots.

More than a decade in, Oaks Collaborative continues to grow, not just in numbers, but in impact. Each year, a new group of students arrives unsure of what college will hold. And each year, many of them leave that first weekend with something steady to hold onto.

In a season of life defined by change, Oaks Collaborative offers something consistent. A place to belong, people to walk with, and a foundation that lasts well beyond the first day of class.

TEAM FULLER

SUBMITTED BY SUSANNAH HODGES | PHOTOS BY TYLER DROKE, ETERNAL FRAMES PHOTOGRAPHY

If you spend any time on the water at Lake Martin, there's a good chance you've spotted them, a family of four on a boat, watching the sun sink behind the pines, someone on a paddleboard, laughter carrying across the cove. That's the Fullers: Lori, Mark, Brooks, and Brady. And if their story sounds like a lot to take in, that's because it genuinely is.

The family has called Auburn home for decades, settling for the last fourteen years in the Grove Hill subdivision, drawn by its mature trees, winding sidewalks, pond-side beauty, and the kind of neighborhood where everybody knows your name and kids play ball in the street until dark. "South Auburn is just so convenient," Lori says, "close to campus, downtown, TigerTown, and it has this wonderful community feel that's hard to find anywhere else."

Since 2021, they've also claimed a second home at Lake Martin: a condo in Stillwaters at Villas on the Harbor in Dadeville, where weekends mean boating, skiing, wave running, paddleboarding, and watching those legendary sunsets from the back of the boat.

A BASEBALL FAMILY

Ask anyone who knows the Fullers what defines them, and the answer comes quickly: baseball. Mark played at Auburn from 1988 to 1992, then spent five years in professional baseball before transitioning to coaching, first as pitching coach at NC State, then back home at Auburn from 2000 to 2004. Since 2015, he has been Auburn Baseball's color commentator for ESPN and the SEC Network, a beloved voice for Tiger fans across the country. He is also co-owner of P360 Sports Performance, a youth baseball and softball training facility where the next generation of players learns the game.

The Fuller sons carried the tradition forward with pride. Brooks played at Auburn from 2018 to 2022. Brady suited up at Troy University before transferring to the University of Houston, where he competed in 2025.

Both brothers were members of the Auburn High School state championship baseball teams — Brooks in 2018, Brady in 2021.

© Best Version Media

And Lori? She was an AU Diamond Doll, Auburn Baseball's hostess program, rounding out what is almost certainly the most thoroughly baseball-devoted household in the state of Alabama.

Their travels as a baseball family have taken them from California to Cape Cod, from Texas to Florida, and plenty of states in between. But the most cherished trips of all were to Omaha, Nebraska, for the College World Series, once on Father's Day weekend when Brooks was a freshman in 2019, and again when he was a senior in 2022.

"Those two trips are ones we'll never forget," the family says simply.

A WORKING FAMILY

The Fullers are, by any measure, a family that works as hard as they play. Between the four of them, they run businesses, serve clients, train athletes, coach minds, and sell homes, all while staying deeply rooted in the Auburn/Lake Martin community they love.

- Lori Fuller, Realtor, eXp Realty
- Mark Fuller, Life Coach & Public Speaker ·
- Mark Fuller, Owner & Personal Trainer, Fuller Fitness
- Mark Fuller, Co-owner, P360 Sports Performance
- Mark Fuller, ESPN/SEC Network, Auburn Baseball Color Commentator
- Brooks Fuller, Founder & CEO, Room2Room Movers · Auburn & Ole Miss
- Brady Fuller, Server, Botanic & will begin training program for a commercial insurance company in October

DAD ON THE CLOCK — BY COACH MARK FULLER

Mark's first book, published in March 2026, was born from a simple, powerful moment: a father coaching his son as he reels in a fish, steady, patient, and present. In a world of constant distraction, Dad on the Clock, is a call to step into fatherhood with intention.

Through personal stories, lessons from decades of coaching, and a foundation of faith, Mark challenges men to show up, lead their families, and invest deeply in their children's lives. It is not a lecture, it is an invitation. An invitation to be present, to lead with purpose, and to become the father your family needs. Available on Amazon or as a signed copy at coachmarkfuller.com.

The book is a natural extension of Mark's broader coaching work. With over thirty years of experience guiding athletes, men, and women through life's challenges, he offers Clarity Coaching, Growth Sessions, and customized programs designed to help people cut through the noise and discover who they were truly meant to be.

Auburn's own Mayor Ron Anders and Auburn head baseball coach Butch Thompson are among those who speak to Mark's impact. "He is a sought-after speaker and has displayed a Christian character that has been a difference maker in our community," Coach Thompson says.

BORN FROM KINDNESS

Some of the best businesses start not with a business plan, but with a mother's heart. In the spring of 2020, as the pandemic shuttered Auburn University's campus mid-semester, Lori noticed desperate posts flooding AU parent pages on Facebook.

Students had left for spring break and were now stranded, unable to return to their dorms and apartments. With baseball season canceled and time suddenly on their hands, she posted a simple offer: Team Fuller would pack up dorm rooms and apartments, ship or store belongings, even transport cars, free of charge.

"Auburn Family helping Auburn Family," as she put it.

That act of generosity planted a seed. Brooks recognized that the chaos of college moving was a universal pain point for students and their families. With his entrepreneurial spirit and tireless work ethic, he founded Room2Room Movers.

Today, the company employs ten full-time staff and more than sixty part-time alumni and students across two locations: Auburn and Oxford, Mississippi, home of Ole Miss. More locations are on the horizon.

"What began as a mom and her sons' heartfelt desire to serve others has grown into something we never could have imagined." — Lori Fuller

LIFE, FAITH & TWO-STEPPING

The Fullers attend Church of the Highlands, where Mark and Lori serve on the Highlands Dream Team. Faith, they will tell you, is not incidental to their story, it is the foundation of it.

"We strive to keep Christ as the center of our lives, our marriage, our family, and our relationships," they share. "We pray that the way we live our lives and treat others will glorify God and draw others near to Him."

Beyond the diamond and the church pew, the family has found uncommon ways to celebrate life together. Lori and Brooks went skydiving for his high school graduation. The whole family scuba dives.

And on any given evening, at Lake Martin or somewhere across the country, you might catch Mark and Lori on a dance floor, two-stepping or waltzing to country music, or jamming to pop and R&B. It's a tradition that stretches back to 1989, when they first danced together as Auburn students at the Rodeo Club in Dadeville.

Thirty-some years later, they still do, which says everything you need to know about Team Fuller.

July in the Garden

Tips from The Potting Shed

SUBMITTED BY SUSANNAH HODGES

July in Alabama is no joke — with temperatures in the mid-90s and humidity to match, your garden needs a little extra love to make it through. Here's how to keep things going strong this month.

CARE TIPS FOR JULY

Water deeply, not daily. Give your plants a long, thorough soak two or three times a week rather than a light sprinkle every day. Deep watering encourages roots to grow down into cooler soil. Always water in the early morning to reduce disease risk.

Mulch everything. A 2–3 inch layer of pine straw or wood chips around your plants keeps the soil cooler, holds in moisture, and cuts down on weeds. It's the single best thing you can do for your garden in July.

Watch for pests. Hot, humid weather brings out spider mites, aphids, and squash vine borers. Check under leaves every few days and treat problems early with neem oil or insecticidal soap before they get out of hand.

Deadhead your annuals. Pinch off spent blooms on zinnias, marigolds, and pentas to keep the flowers coming all summer long.

WHAT TO PLANT IN JULY

Stick with plants that love the heat. Zinnias, vinca, pentas, portulaca, and celosia are all excellent choices for adding color right now and will bloom until frost. For the vegetable garden, okra and southern peas are perfectly at home in July heat. Basil, rosemary, and thyme also thrive this time of year — just keep the basil pinched back so it doesn't bolt.

Pro tip: Late July is the time to start broccoli, cabbage, and cauliflower seeds indoors so you'll have transplants ready for the fall garden in September.

WHAT TO SKIP FOR NOW

Hold off on lettuce, spinach, pansies, and snapdragons — they simply won't survive the heat. Wait until October for those.

Stop by The Potting Shed for heat-tolerant plants, mulch, and everything else you need to get through July.

STAR-SPANGLED MASON JAR LANTERNS

SUBMITTED BY LESLIE FUENTES

Looking for a simple, meaningful way to spend time together this summer? With just a handful of supplies, these painted mason jar lanterns are an easy, kid-friendly craft for your Fourth of July celebrations.

Set up outside on the patio or gather around the kitchen table, turn on some music and enjoy the process together.

SUPPLIES

- Mason jars of any size
- Red, white and blue acrylic paint (washable tempera paint or glass paint work too)
- Paint brushes of varying small and medium size
- Tea light candles or LED candles (LED is safest for younger helpers)
- Twine or ribbon
- Glitter (optional)
- Themed stickers (optional)
- Glue stick (optional)
- Hot glue gun (optional for securing decorations)

INSTRUCTIONS

1. First, prep your space by covering your work area with newspaper or a disposable tablecloth. Make sure the jars are clean and completely dry before painting.
2. Start painting your design directly onto the outside of the mason jars. Try stars, stripes, firework bursts, or abstract red, white, and blue patterns. There's no right or wrong way to do it. Each lantern should reflect its creator's personality.
3. Once the first layer dries, add more layers of color and details. Use smaller brushes for stars, thinner stripes or outlines.
4. You could add in some sparkle by sprinkling glitter onto the wet paint or applying it once dry with a thin layer of glue.
5. Decorate the rim by adding twine or ribbon around the top of the jar. You can wrap it several times and create a bow for a rustic look. Finish off your design by adding themed stickers or small embellishments.
6. Place a tea light or LED candle inside each jar. If you're using real candles, always supervise and handle them with care.
7. Line your lanterns along a walkway, place them on a patio table, or use them as a centerpiece in your living room or dining table. They look especially magical when they begin to glow.

This craft is about slowing down, getting creative and making something together. And the best part is that your finished pieces can be enjoyed all season long as a reminder of time well spent. So gather your supplies, invite the kids and get creative this Fourth of July.

The Revolutionary

DR. JOSEPH WARREN AT THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL

BY BILL NORTON | BILLNORTONAUTHOR@GMAIL.COM

What is America's greatest trait? Or, more personally for you and me, what trait of Americans underlies our nation's greatness? I suggest this trait is contained in a paradox written into the Declaration of Independence 250 years ago.

The Declaration reads that "all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness." "All men" refers to the masses, not just to the aristocracy, the royalty, or the wealthy. These rights are universal.

However, the thirty-nine signers of the Declaration pledged "our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor." The signers committed to securing these universal rights as individuals. Here is the paradox: The sacrifice of the few was pledged to secure the rights of the many.

Before introducing Joseph Warren, a little-known example of this paradox, let's set the historical context.

In the mid-1700s, the British Crown looked on the remote, backward, and weak American colonies like a piggybank to crack open. The colonies resisted led by Boston, Massachusetts.

1765: The Stamp Act—Stamped/taxed paper required for all documents, even playing cards.

1768: The British army occupies Boston to enforce taxation.

1770: The Boston Massacre—Nervous British soldiers fire into a crowd of protestors killing five.

1773: The Tea Act—The Boston Tea Party protests taxation without representation.

April 19, 1775—Colonial minutemen battle British soldiers in Lexington and Concord.

June 17, 1775—Battle of Bunker Hill overlooking Boston (actually fought on Breed's Hill).

At Bunker Hill, British troops sought to dislodge the colonials with three assaults up the slope. During the final attack, the colonials ran out of ammunition and fought with clubs, axes, knives, and bare hands. The Brits used bayonets to overrun the defenders. On Bunker Hill, civil resistance became a revolution, and the revolution became a war for independence.

During the 1760s and 70s, Dr. Joseph Warren was a prominent Boston physician. Warren was from a well-off farming family and a graduate of Harvard. Both locals and British officers were his patients.

The good doctor was also a revolutionary. He was president of the Massachusetts Provincial Congress, active in the Sons of Liberty, and directed Paul Revere and William Dawes on their midnight ride to warn the minutemen. Warren would likely have been a future signer of the Declaration. He was nominated for the rank of Major General in the Continental Army just before the battle of Bunker Hill.

However, on Bunker Hill, Warren set aside his provisional rank and asked to serve as a private. Instead of being safely in the rear, he was a leader and inspiration to those desperate men in the brunt of the fighting. Warren died in the final British charge. He was just thirty-three years old.

Warren's sacrifice has been replicated—in the ultimate and many lesser ways—throughout our history. Americans make this country great by being a radically new type of revolutionary: Not fulfilling their self-rights but being fulfilled by service to others.

It's a rare trait for a people. May God bless our land of liberty by continuing to raise up selfless revolutionaries. And, my fellow patriot, let's you and me sign up.

The Death of General Warren at the Battle of Bunker's Hill, oil painting by John Trumbill.

BBQ Chicken Flatbread

A QUICK & DELICIOUS FAVORITE

BY ERIN VANDER WEELE

After trying this recipe, BBQ chicken flatbread might be your next go-to dinner for those busy days. This dish is simple to prepare, loaded with flavor, and convenient for a weeknight meal. Plus, it's versatile enough to please the whole family.

INGREDIENTS

- 2 flatbreads
- Olive oil
- 2 cups shredded rotisserie chicken
- 3/4 cup BBQ sauce
- 1 cup shredded mozzarella cheese
- 1 small red onion, thinly sliced (optional)
- 1/4 cup fresh cilantro, chopped (optional)
- Sliced avocado (optional)

INSTRUCTIONS

1. Preheat oven to 425°F. In a bowl, combine the shredded chicken with the BBQ sauce and mix until the chicken is fully coated.
2. Place your flatbreads on a baking sheet lined with foil. Brush a light amount of olive oil over the top of the bread to help crisp and add flavor. Spread the BBQ chicken mixture evenly over the flatbreads. Sprinkle the shredded mozzarella cheese and sliced red onion on top, as desired.
3. Place the baking sheet in the oven and bake for about 10-12 minutes, or until the cheese begins to brown, and the edges of the flatbreads are crisp.
4. Remove flatbreads from the oven and cut into slices. For added flavor, sprinkle fresh cilantro (chopped) and avocado slices over the top. Drizzle with additional BBQ sauce as desired.

BBQ chicken flatbread is a quick way to enjoy a variety of flavors in one delicious meal. Perfect for busy weeknights or casual gatherings, this dish will have everyone asking for seconds!
