POULTRY FARMS

Growing 2 million birds

The poultry sector in Turkey is a cornerstone of the country's animal production industry. Chicken meat is a staple in Turkish cuisine and is widely consumed both domestically and internationally.

Poultry meat, particularly white meat, is a key component of daily meals for human, animal, and even agricultural consumers. While poultry meat is primarily used for human consumption, by-products such as intestines and blood are utilized in fish feed production. Additionally, poultry waste is a valuable agricultural fertilizer due to its high urea content.

This project is expertly managed by our AGI group under the guidance of specialists and experienced veterinarians.
