Introduction

Each factor has its own process.

Some are just a check to know the process has been completed.

Others require the student and family to complete a survey.

Others require the student to complete an evaluation.

Many have their own unique measuring instrument to evaluate a baseline and track progress.

The primary purpose of the table is to show the diversity of factors that can be considered and the date that item was last addressed.

Some of the surveys are well established by the industry.

Some are new and are in the process of evolving.
