Subject: Protect What Matters Most — Review Your Estate Plan This Month

October is recognized as Estate Planning Awareness Month, a perfect time to ensure your plans are up to date. Life changes quickly — from new family members to property purchases to formalizing a domestic partnership — and your estate plan should evolve along with you.

Why planning matters:

- It ensures your wishes are legally protected.
- It prevents unnecessary stress and confusion for your loved ones.
- It safeguards assets and clarifies decision-making during difficult times.

Common concerns people face:

- Thinking they're too young or don't have enough assets to plan.
- Avoiding the topic due to discomfort or cost.
- Letting outdated or incomplete documents create risk when it matters most (including domestic partnership declarations and advance directives).

What help is available:

Our office can guide you through every step — and we work with commissioned, insured, and compliant notaries who can bring the signing process directly to you or your loved ones, if needed to places such as nursing homes, assisted living homes, hospitals, etc. They're fully equipped with mobile scanners, printers, and secure document-handling tools.

Taking a few hours this month to review and update your documents can save significant time, emotional strain, and expense later.
