V. KEY CONCEPT for the Week – “CONTROLLING YOUR TIME”

(In life coaching, Key Concepts are the basic building blocks for personal growth and overall success. Some people use only a few key concepts; some people learn and practice all of them.)

The Key Concept I'd like you to practice this week is the concept of controlling your time.

Here's the definition we'll use for controlling your time: “Making the choice to manage the single greatest resource, outside of your mind, that you will ever have.”

First, we will review the perceptions of controlling your time that you have right now. All you have to do is answer each of these questions:

1. How well do you believe you control your time now? a) Not well, b) Occasionally well, c) Very well.

_____ Tell me why.

2. Overall, do you feel that you are in control of how you spend your time, or do you feel that other things or other people are more in control of your time than you are?

3. Who, or what, then, do you feel is most in control of your time right now?

4. What would you like to be doing with (some of) your time, that you are not doing now?

5. If you could change anything about your use of your time, from now on, what would it be?

6. What is the one thing you could actually do now, to give you more control over your time?

VI. THIS WEEK: To practice the concept of controlling your time this week, I'd like you to keep a daily schedule of what you do each day – hour by hour. After you've completed your list, make a check mark by everything on your schedule that you'd like to change. When we discuss this, we'll come up with an action plan to deal with the things you want to change.

VIII. CLOSING
