Born under the light of a full moon, the Fallen are tied to the ancient Celtic Tree Calendar. Each tree reflects who they are at their core, grounding them in the natural world while guiding their journey.

It isn't a life they chose. A single act of sin, committed in the final breath of an otherwise virtuous life, sealed their fate. But in the moment between life and death, they were given a choice—a chance to rise again, bound to a purpose they didn't ask for, yet couldn't deny.

The Fallen stand as guardians, fighting for humanity against evils that seek to corrupt and destroy. Their trees tie them to the Earth, but their fight is far from grounded. It's a battle of redemption, purpose, and proving that even those who fall can rise again.
