PASSIONATE ABOUT MAKING ORGANISATIONS THRIVE THROUGH PURPOSEFUL AGILITY

As an experienced Agile practitioner with significant on the job experience, I have come to realise that it is important to clearly understand that Agile is not a set of static principles. Agile is not a linear process.

To get the best for any organisation it requires a mind-set that encourages continuous improvement, embracing change and learning from experience. It requires the whole organisation to have the same focus, share the purpose and work in unison to achieve desired outcomes.

This is why I firmly believe if Agile is to succeed in an organisation everyone needs to have an understanding of Agile principles and how they operate. It is not about becoming Agile practitioners or experts. Having the whole organisation familiar, means that everyone can contribute to the strategy and goals of the organisation because they understand the principles and play their part in its success.

This is why at Source Agility we have put together different levels of knowledge-based mentoring, to management offers to assist your organisation get the most out of Agile principals.
