Brows for Oval/Long Face

For oval or long face shapes, brows that are less arched, more straight, and slightly thicker are the most flattering. By extending the tails of the brows, you can create the illusion of a shorter face length, enhancing the balance of your features. This shape adds width to the face, creating a harmonious look that complements your natural proportions.

Brows for Round Face

For a round face shape, creating brows that are highly arched, narrow, and slightly shorter is the most flattering. This style helps elongate the face, while shortening the tails of the brows adds a slimming effect, enhancing the overall balance and structure of your features.

Brows for Square Face

For a square face shape, the goal is to balance out the strong jawline by drawing attention to the upper part of the face. Achieve this by shaping brows that are thicker and wider. Unlike a round face, a square face can carry a bold and full brow, which helps soften angular features and create a harmonious look. If desired, go for a bolder brow to complement the strength of your face shape.
