

REAL ESTATE TOOLBOX

First Home

BUYER'S GUIDE

Table of Contents

- 3 Top Reasons To Own Your Home
- 4 How To Kick Off the Homebuying Process
- 6 Myth 1: My Student Loan Debt Means I Won't Qualify
- 8 Myth 2: I Need To Have a 20% Down Payment
- 10 Myth 3: Renting Makes More Financial Sense
- 13 Key Terms To Know When Buying a Home
- 14 Your Journey to Homeownership
- 15 Why Pre-Approval Matters
- 17 Things to Avoid After Applying for a Mortgage
- 20 Be Realistic About Your Desired Features
- 21 Checklist To Determine Your Must-Haves
- 22 Three Things To Know About Today's Housing Market

Top Reasons To Own Your Home

Accomplishment

Feeling a sense of achievement and pride

Loved Ones

Prioritizing the needs of those closest to you

Stability

Locking in your monthly housing payment with a fixed-rate mortgage

Financial Investment

Growing your assets and net worth

Comfort

Enjoying features that enhance your lifestyle

Privacy

Having a space that's your own

Personal Expression

Tailoring your home to your unique style

Community

Being a part of a broader social group

If you're ready to buy a home, let's get the process started today.

How To Kick Off the Homebuying Process

Buying a house can feel like a daunting task. It involves a lot of different factors, including everything from loan qualification and credit checks to appraisals, legal contracts, and more. It can all feel a little unapproachable, especially if you've never done it before. But it doesn't have to be that way

Acknowledge This Once-in-a-Lifetime Achievement

As you take the first steps on this journey, focus on the excitement you feel. Homeownership changes lives - it's that simple. It gives you more stability, more stake in the community, and a greater sense of pride and accomplishment.

Don't worry - no one expects you to know everything about the process upfront. Instead, focus on your homebuying goal and how achieving it will change your life. Let the experts help you along the way with the finer details. Your job is to think about what you want, what you need, and who's going to help you achieve your goal.

Build Your Knowledge and Your Team

When it comes to buying your first home, seeking out information about homeownership and the home-buying process is the first step. Before you can make one of the biggest and most impactful purchases of your life, you need to understand what it takes to become a homeowner and why homeownership is so worthwhile. That's where the experts come in.

In this guide, you'll find expert insights and research to help you learn how to get started, what you need to know, and what you can expect from the process. That way, you'll have confidence as you take this important step forward.

Understand the Key Pieces of the Puzzle

Another thing to remember is that you may also need to overcome some of the hurdles that you feel are holding you back.

Any time you make a big life decision, it's human nature to have concerns or look for reasons you're not ready. In the rest of this guide, you'll explore some of the main things that could be holding you back, including:

- Student Loan Debt
- Down Payments
- Beliefs on Renting vs. Buying

You'll find out what's true and what's not. That way, if you're on the fence about whether or not you want to buy, or you're just kicking off your journey into homeownership, you'll have the information you need to make an informed decision.

After all, you know friends who are buying houses, so why can't you?

Ultimately

If you're thinking about homeownership, make sure you have the information you need to make your decision. Let's start by breaking down the top three myths that could be holding you back.

Myth 1: My Student Debt Means I Won't Qualify

If you have student loans and are looking to buy a home, you may be wondering how that debt could impact your plans. Do you have to wait until you've paid off your loans? Or could you qualify for a home loan with that debt? To give you the answers you're searching for, let's take a look at what recent data shows.

Do You Have To Delay Your Plans Because of Student Loans?

If you're worried your student loans mean you have to put your homeownership goals on hold, you're not alone. In fact, many first-time buyers in this situation believe they have to delay their plans. According to data from the National Association of Realtors (NAR):

“When asked specifically about purchasing a home, half of nonhomeowners say student loan debt is delaying them from purchasing a home (51%).”

When asked why their student loans are putting their plans on the back burner, three key themes emerge:

- 47% say their student loans make it harder to save for a down payment
- 45% say they think they can't qualify for a home loan because of existing debt
- 43% say they believe the delay is necessary even though they've never applied for a mortgage

No matter which reason resonates most with you, you should know a delay may not be necessary. While everyone's situation is unique, your goal may be more within your reach than you realize.

Can You Qualify for a Home Loan if You Have Student Loans?

In the same report from NAR, data shows many current homeowners have student loan debt themselves:

“Nearly one-quarter of all home buyers, and 37% of first-time buyers, had student debt, with a typical amount of $30,000.”

That means other people in a similar situation were able to qualify for and buy a home even though they also had student loan debt. You may be able to do the same, especially if you have a steady source of income. Apartment Therapy drives this point home:

“... buying a home with student loans is possible, experts say. The proof is in the numbers, too: Some 40 percent of first-time homebuyers have student loan debt, according to the NAR study.”

The key takeaway is, for many people, homeownership is achievable even with student loans.

The best way to make a decision about your goals and next steps is to talk to the professionals. A real estate advisor can walk you through your specific situation, your options, and what has worked for other buyers like you.

They can also connect you with other professionals, such as a trusted lender, who can help. You don't have to figure this out on your own - lean on the experts so you have the information you need to make the right decision for you.

Ultimately

Many other buyers with student loan debt are already achieving their homeownership dreams. Maybe it's time to take the next step toward making yours a reality too. Let's connect to discuss your options and find out how close you are to achieving your goal.

Myth 2: I Need To Have a 20% Down Payment

As you set out on your homebuying journey, you're likely working on saving for your purchase. But do you actually need to save 20% for your down payment?

A Common and Costly Misconception

If you've asked anyone for advice on how much to save, chances are at least one of them suggested you should save 20% of the purchase price for your down payment. While that's great if you're able to do so, saving that much can be especially challenging for first-time buyers.

But there's good news. While well-intended, that advice is likely based on a common misconception. The National Association of Realtors (NAR) says:

“One of the biggest misconceptions among housing consumers is what the typical down payment is and what amount is needed to enter homeownership.”

The truth is, you may not need to save as much as you think. Unless specified by your loan type or lender, it's typically not required to put 20% down.

The Benefits of 20% Down

While you usually don't need to put 20% down, doing so can have some great perks, if you're able. Those may include:

1. Your interest rate may be lower.
2. You'll end up paying less over the life of your loan.
3. Your offer will stand out.
4. You won't need Private Mortgage Insurance (PMI).

According to the Profile of Home Buyers and Sellers from NAR, the median down payment hasn't been over 20% since 2005. Today, the median down payment for all homebuyers is only 13%. And it's even lower for first-time homebuyers. Typically, they've put down just 7%. Better yet, there are also loan options that require as little as 3.5% (or even 0%) down for buyers who qualify (see chart below):

Median Down Payments

Today's median down payment is far less than 20%

Sources: NAR, FHA

What Does This Mean for You?

While a down payment of 20% or more does have benefits, the typical buyer is putting far less than that down. That's good news for you because it means you could be closer to your homebuying dream than you realize.

If you're interested in learning more about low down payment options, there are several places to go. There are programs for qualified buyers with down payments as low as 3.5%. There are also options like VA and USDA loans with no down payment requirements for qualified applicants.

To understand the programs that are out there, you need to do your homework. Information is available through sites like downpaymentresource.com. But it also helps to turn to the experts for insights and advice. Be sure to work with a real estate advisor from the start to learn what you may qualify for in the homebuying process.

Ultimately

Don't let down payment myths keep you from hitting your homeownership goals. If you're looking to buy this year, let's review your options together.

Myth 3: Renting Makes More Financial Sense

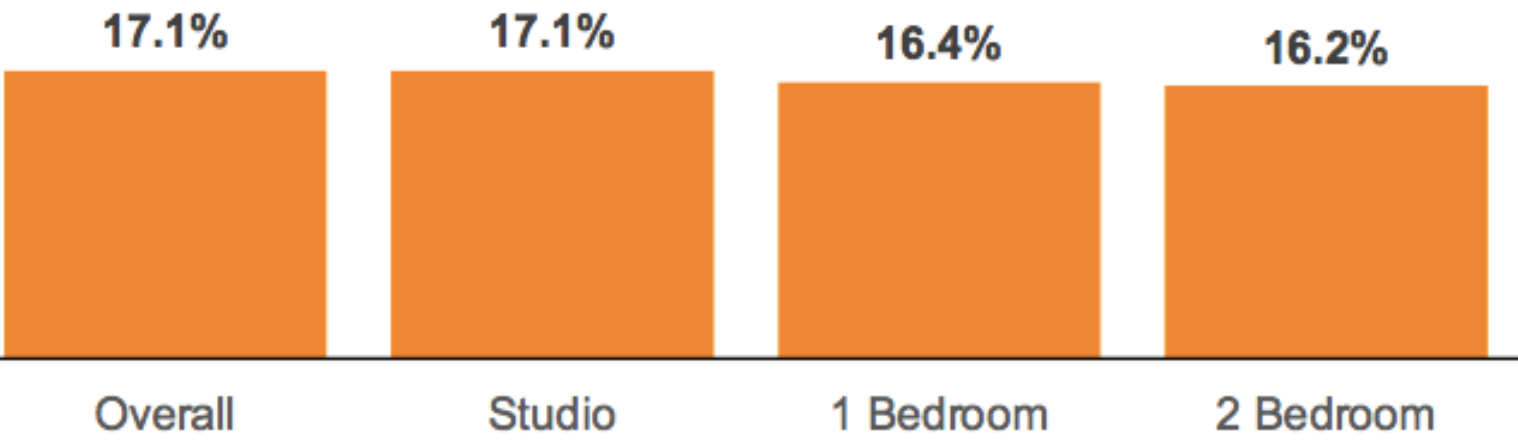

Think renting is a better bet from a financial perspective? You may want to think again. History shows rental prices are on their way up and that means your monthly housing costs will likely rise each time you sign or renew a lease. Homeownership can provide longer-term stability.

Rents Are Going Up Again

According to Census data, rents have risen consistently for decades. And that trend is continuing this year. Data from realtor.com shows just how much rental prices are surging throughout the country. The graph below highlights rental unit price increases over the past year:

Rental Prices Are Skyrocketing

Increase in Rents from February 2021 to February 2022

Source: realtor.com

If you're a renter and plan on signing a new lease, your monthly costs are likely to go up when you do. Those rising costs can have a big impact on your financial goals, including any plans you're making to save for a home purchase.

Homeownership Offers Stable Monthly Costs

Of course, one of the key benefits of owning your home is that you're able to lock in and stabilize your payments for the duration of your loan. That's not the case when you rent.

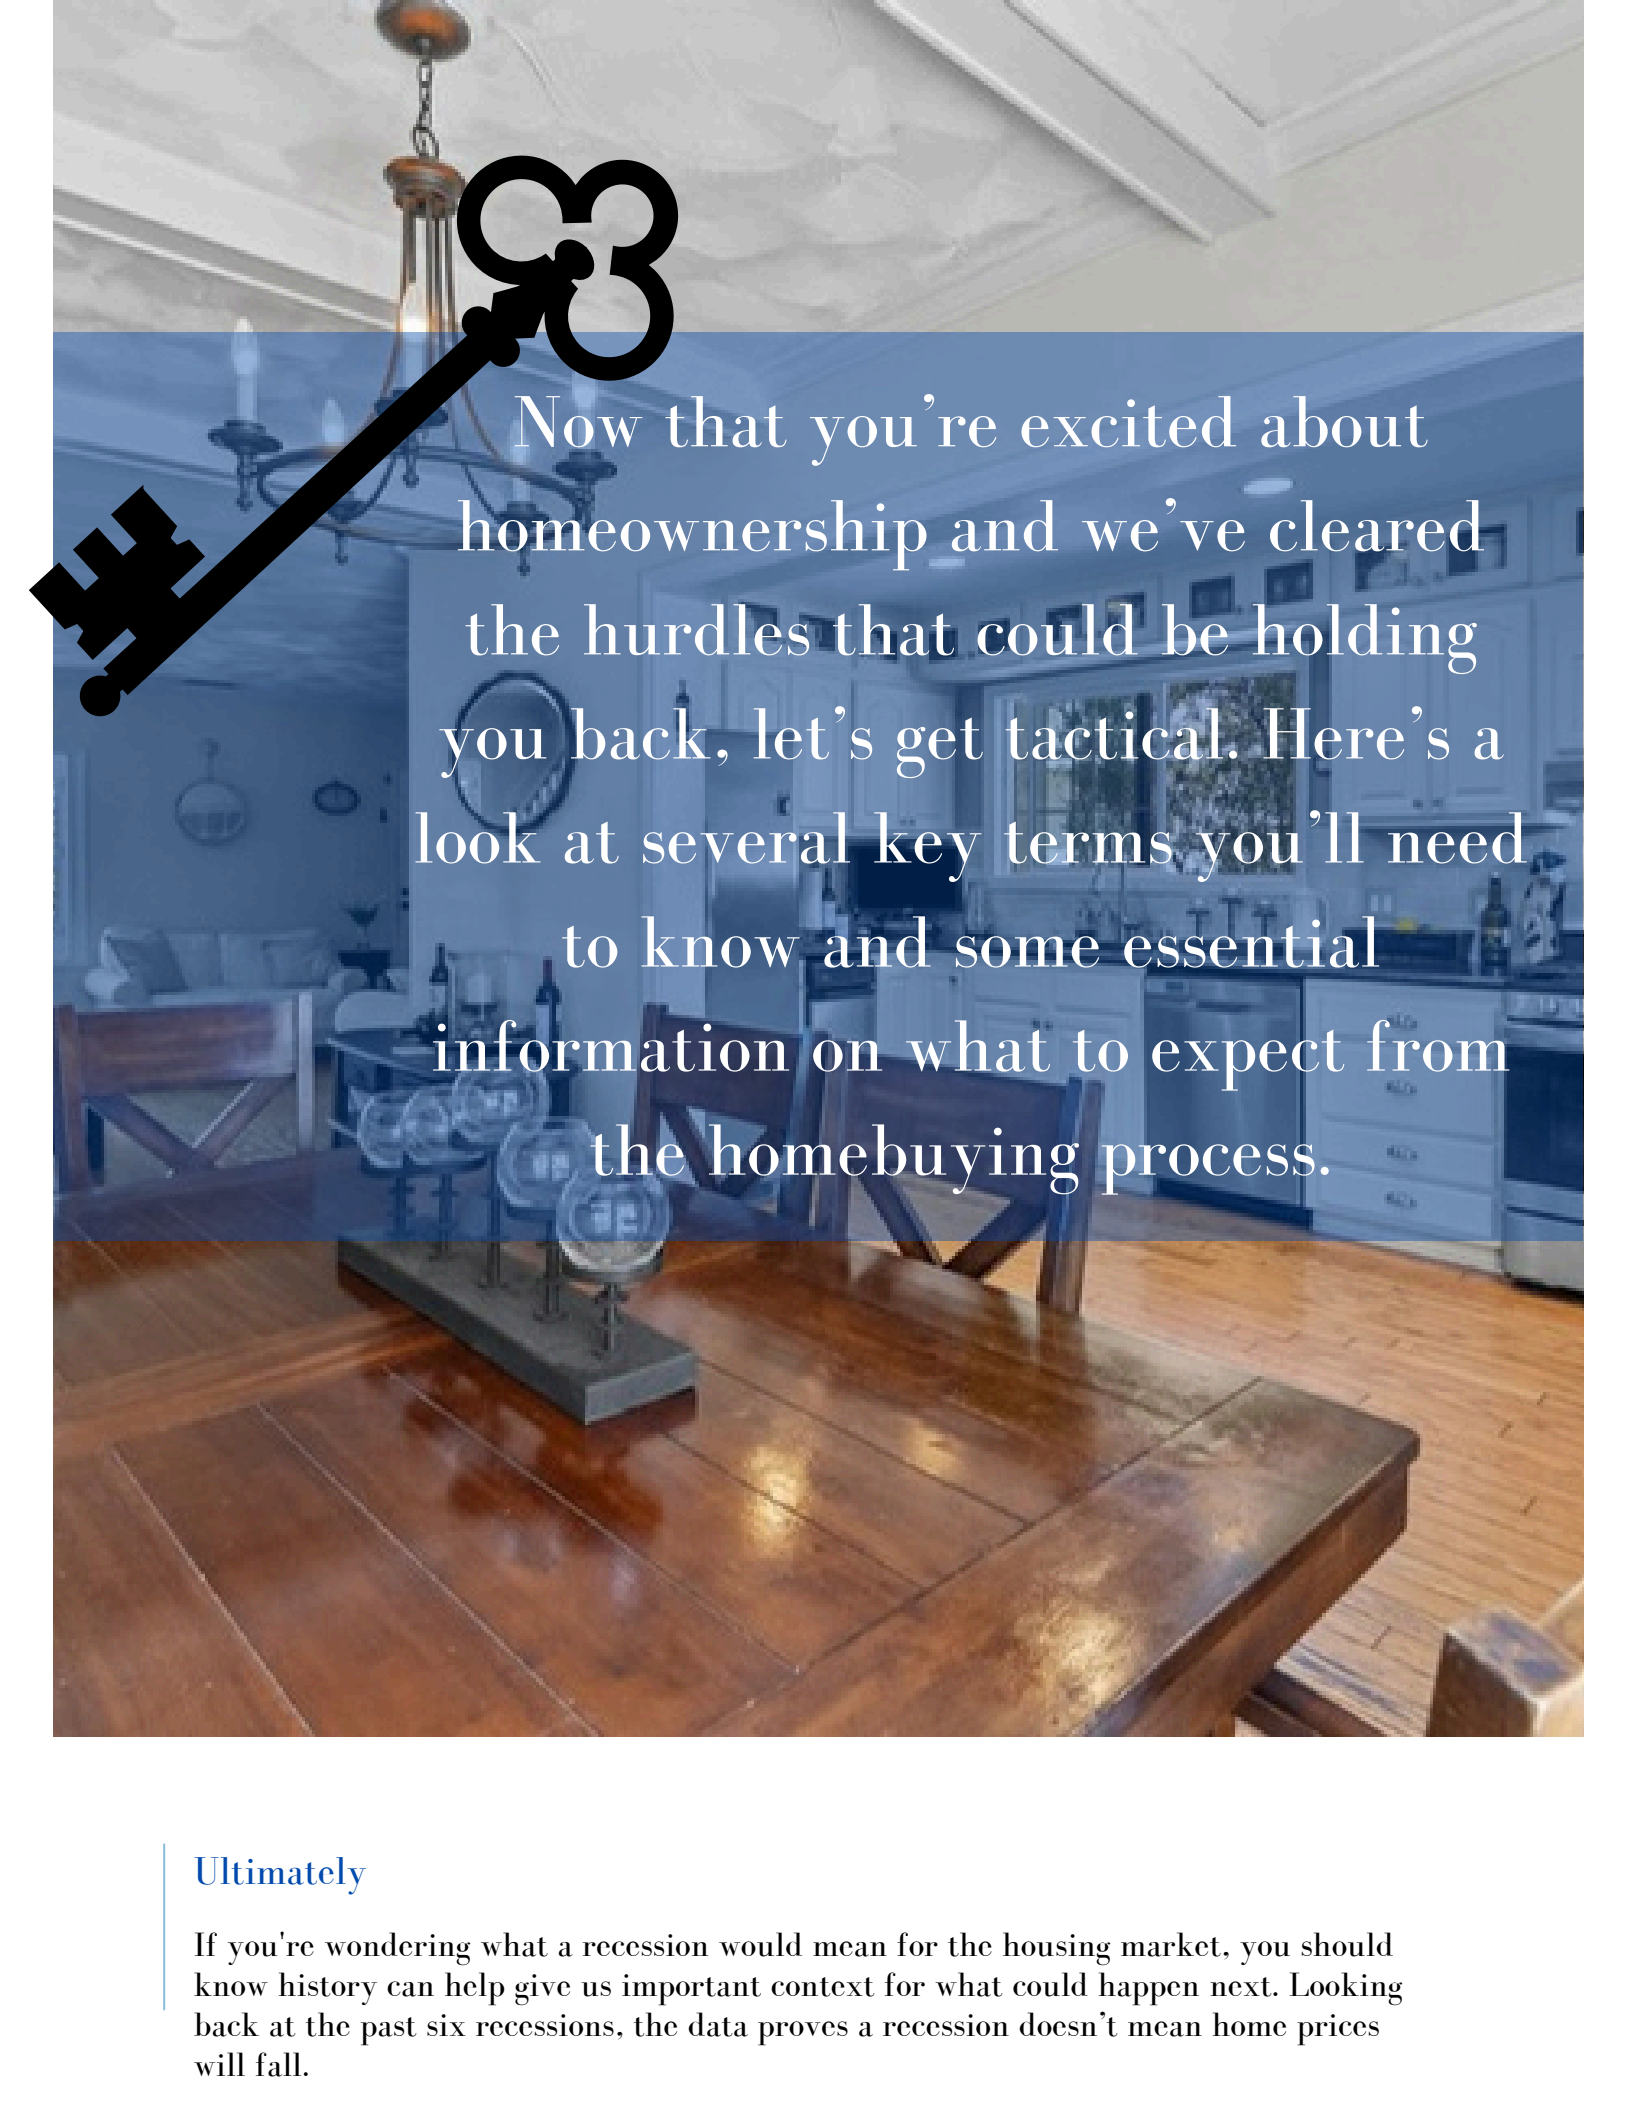

While rents are already on the rise, there's a good chance many people will see their rental costs increase even more this year. As Danielle Hale, Chief Economist at realtor.com, says:

“With rents already at a high and expected to keep going up, rental affordability will increasingly challenge many Americans in 2022. For those thinking about making the transition from renting to buying their first home, rising rents will remain a motivating factor. . . .”

So, if you're ready to become a homeowner, waiting any longer may not make financial sense. Instead, escape the cycle of rising rents and enjoy the many benefits that come with homeownership today.

Ultimately

Don't let the convenience of renting fool you. While it may be nice to avoid the routine maintenance on your apartment, the trade off that comes with it is steep. By renting, you're paying more for that convenience than you may know. Let's connect to explore your options and the many benefits of homeownership.

Now that you're excited about homeownership and we've cleared the hurdles that could be holding you back, let's get tactical. Here's a look at several key terms you'll need to know and some essential information on what to expect from the homebuying process.

Ultimately

If you're wondering what a recession would mean for the housing market, you should know history can help give us important context for what could happen next. Looking back at the past six recessions, the data proves a recession doesn't mean home prices will fall.

Key Terms To Know When Buying a Home

Appraisal

A report highlighting the estimated value of the property completed by a qualified third party.

Lenders rely on appraisals to validate a home's value and ensure they're not lending more than the home is worth.

Closing Costs

The fees required to complete the real estate transaction. Paid at closing.

Ask your lender for a complete list of closing cost items, including points, taxes, title insurance, and more.

Credit Score

A number ranging from 300–850 that's based on an analysis of your credit history.

This helps lenders determine the likelihood you'll repay future debts.

Down Payment

Down payments are typically 3.5–20% of the purchase price of the home. Some 0% down programs are also available.

Ask your lender for more information.

Mortgage Rate

The interest rate you pay to borrow money when buying a home.

The lower the rate, the better.

Pre-Approval Letter

A letter from a lender that shows what they're willing to lend you for your home loan.

This is a critical step in today's competitive market.

Inspection Contingency

A provision in a contract requiring an inspection to be completed.

While it can be tempting to waive in a competitive market, the home inspection is essential. It gives you information on the home's condition and potential repairs.

Affordability

A measure of whether someone earns enough to qualify for a loan on a typical home based on the most recent price, income, and mortgage rate data.

As prices and mortgage rates continue to rise, that will impact how much home you can afford.

Equity

The value of your home above the total amount of liens against your home.

With today's price appreciation, many homeowners are realizing they have more equity than they thought and they're using it to move.

Why Pre-Approval Matters

You may have heard it's important to get pre-approved for a mortgage at the beginning of the homebuying process, but what does that really mean, and why is it so important?

Why Pre-Approval Is Key

When looking for a home, the temptation to fall in love with a house that's outside your budget is very real. So, before you start shopping around, it's helpful to know your price range and how much money you can borrow for your loan. Pre-approval from a lender is the best way to do this.

Here's how it works. According to NerdWallet, pre-approval is a letter that:

“. . . states the amount and type of mortgage the lender is willing to offer, along with the terms."

To get this written confirmation, you'll need to provide information about your financials, including your income, employment information, your credit history, and more. NerdWallet explains:

“Preapproval requires you to provide proof of your financial history and stability. The lender will verify your income, employment, assets and debts, and will check your credit report.

You'll provide information in the form of W-2s, a current pay stub, a summary of your assets and your total monthly expenses. . . .”

While it may sound like a lot of documentation, the right professionals will make the process easy for you. Your pre-approval will help you know not just what you can borrow, but it's also a great tool to help you set a budget and really understand your financial options. This way, you can begin your home search with a clear picture of what you want to look for.

Today's Market Is Competitive, So Being Ready as a Buyer Is Key

The pre-approval process is more important than ever in today's competitive market. With limited inventory, there are many more buyers than sellers right now, and that's fueling competition for homes.

According to the National Association of Realtors (NAR), the average home is receiving multiple offers, so bidding wars are the norm as buyers compete with each other for their dream home. Pre-approval can help you stand out from the crowd.

It shows a seller that you're a serious buyer. When a seller knows you're qualified to purchase the home, you're in a better position to be the winning offer. That's because the seller will know you're ready to move quickly.

Freddie Mac explains:

“By having a pre-approval letter from your lender, you're telling the seller that you're a serious buyer, and you've been pre-approved for a mortgage by your lender for a specific dollar amount. In a true bidding war, your offer will likely get dropped if you don't already have one.”

Today's housing market is changing day to day. So, you're going to need guidance to navigate these waters. It's important to have a team of professionals (a loan officer and a real estate agent) to help make your dreams a reality.

Ultimately

A pre-approval letter is an essential part of the homebuying process. Not only does being pre-approved bring clarity to your homebuying budget, it also shows sellers how serious you are about purchasing a home. Let's connect so you have the expertise you need to tackle this step.

Things To Avoid After Applying for a Mortgage

Once you've applied for a mortgage, there are some key things to keep in mind. While it's exciting to start thinking about moving in and decorating, be careful when it comes to making any big purchases. Here's a list of things you may not realize you need to avoid after applying for your home loan.

There's a Shortage of Homes on the Market Today, Not a Surplus

1. Don't Deposit Large Sums of Cash

Lenders need to source your money, and cash isn't easily traceable. Before you deposit any amount of cash into your accounts, discuss the proper way to document your transactions with your loan officer.

2. Don't Make Any Large Purchases

It's not just home-related purchases that could disqualify you from your loan. Any large purchases can be red flags for lenders. People with new debt have higher debt-to-income ratios (how much debt you have compared to your monthly income). Since higher ratios make for riskier loans, borrowers may end up no longer qualifying for their mortgage. Resist the temptation to make any large purchases, even for furniture or appliances.

3. Don't Co-Sign Loans for Anyone

When you co-sign for a loan, you're making yourself accountable for that loan's success and repayment. With that obligation comes higher debt-to-income ratios as well. Even if you promise you won't be the one making the payments, your lender will have to count the payments against you.

4. Don't Change Bank Accounts

Remember, lenders need to source and track your assets. That task is much easier when there's consistency among your accounts. Before you transfer any money, speak with your loan officer.

5. Don't Apply for New Credit

It doesn't matter whether it's a new credit card or a new car. When you have your credit report run by organizations in multiple financial channels (mortgage, credit card, auto, etc.), your FICO® score will be impacted. Lower credit scores can determine your interest rate and possibly even your eligibility for approval.

6. Don't Close Any Accounts

Many buyers believe having less available credit makes them less risky and more likely to be approved. This isn't true. A major component of your score is your length and depth of credit history (as opposed to just your payment history) and your total usage of credit as a percentage of available credit. Closing accounts has a negative impact on both of those aspects of your score.

Any blip in income, assets, or credit should be reviewed and executed in a way that ensures your home loan can still be approved. If your job or employment status has changed recently, share that with your lender as well. The best plan is to fully disclose and discuss your intentions with your loan officer before you do anything financial in nature.

Ultimately

You want your purchase to go as smoothly as possible. Remember, before you make any large purchases, move your money around, or make any major life changes, be sure to consult your lender - someone who's qualified to explain how your financial decisions may impact your home loan.

Indoor

Must-Have

Nice-To-Have

Open Floor Plan

Ample Storage Space

Updated Kitchen

Designated Home Office

Walk-In Attic and/or Finished Basement

Guest Room

Laundry Room

Room for a Home Gym

Walk-In Pantry

Updated Bathrooms

Garage

Outdoor

Must-Have

Nice-To-Have

Large Backyard

Fenced-in Yard

Outdoor Living Area

Garden Space

Pool/Spa

Other

Must-Have

Nice-To-Have

Short Commute Time

Access to Bike Paths or Parks

Near Shopping and Leisure Facilities

Near Public Transit

Three Things To Know About Today's Housing Market

Based on what we've seen over the past two years, one thing is clear: the current housing market is one for the record books. As a first-time buyer, here are three key components that are shaping this unprecedented market.

The Shortage of Homes for Sale

The number of homes available for sale hit an all-time low in January 2022. As Danielle Hale, Chief Economist for realtor.com, says:

“We expect that we'll start to see a turnaround and inventory will stabilize and start to go up a little bit in 2022. . . . But that means we're looking at inventory levels of roughly half of what we saw before the pandemic. For buyers, the market is likely to continue to move fast. If you see a home you like, you want to jump on it right away.”

Buyer Competition and Bidding Wars

The ongoing low supply, coupled with high demand, creates significant buyer competition and bidding wars. Some buyers are offering over the asking price, all cash, or waiving some contingencies. Just remember, you don't want to waive the inspection, as it's necessary to determine the condition of the home you're buying.

Home Price Appreciation

That competition among buyers is driving prices up. Over the past year, home price appreciation has reached record levels throughout the country. According to CoreLogic: “Home prices rose 18% during 2021 in the CoreLogic Home Price Index, the largest annual gain recorded in its 45-year history...” The good news is, rising prices helps you know you're making a good long-term investment. That's because once you move in, that ongoing price appreciation will help grow your home's value with time.

For more information about buying or selling your home, contact us today!

www.RealEstateToolbox.com
agents@realestatetoolbox.com

(805) 424-6226

REAL ESTATE TOOLBOX

