

OUR CHIEF SCIENTIFIC OFFICER SAYS:

“Oil production in skin is impacted by hormones. As hormones spike, so does oil production. And that’s why so many teens going through adolescence suffer from acne. But women also experience hormonal fluctuations throughout their life and into menopause, making acne a returning problem for adult women even into their 40s and up.” – Dr. Beth Lange

FACT:

It seems like a pimple just appears overnight. But it's actually a process two or three weeks in the making. Acne forms as a result of one main reason — a clogged pore.

THE SCIENCE BEHIND ACNE:

Here's how acne forms:

1. As surface skin cells die, they can sometimes shed unevenly and clump together in the pore.
2. Oil produced inside the pore mixes with these clumps and forms a plug.
3. The plug traps oil that continues to be produced, enlarging the pore.
4. P. acnes bacteria, which naturally exist on the skin, flourish in the oxygen-deprived environment within the clogged pore. This can trigger a reaction that can lead to tender, swollen, red lesions.
