Hi, my name is

KEVIN HUNTTING

Kevin is a transitions & leadership coach and former Fortune 500 marketing leader who spent over 17 years working at iconic brands like GE, Banana Republic, Old Navy, Fossil Group and consulting in DC at the Inter-American Development Bank. Specializing in areas like CRM, eCommerce, customer insights, and digital marketing, he thrived in leadership roles, applying his strategic mind and relentless drive to push boundaries and achieve results.

But Kevin's journey was never just about professional success. As a gay man who came out to his parents with courage and determination, he's always gone after what he desired—whether it was a challenging career, a loving relationship, or the freedom to be himself. His willingness to face the unknown and embrace change took him to vibrant cities across the U.S. and beyond, including San Francisco, Connecticut, Texas, Washington DC, Miami, and Mexico City.

Everything shifted when he met his husband, a Mexican diplomat, whose career opened the door to an entirely different world. Following his heart led Kevin to reevaluate his own life and career, bringing him to a moment of deep introspection.

Recognizing his passion for helping others unlock their potential and navigate life's transitions, Kevin launched his own coaching practice in 2020. His approach is grounded in a deep belief that the thoughts and emotions we hold shape our experiences, and that cultivating awareness, acceptance, and conscious choice can transform lives.

Along his journey, Kevin learned the profound importance of self-kindness and compassion. Today, he shares his life with his husband, Jonathan, and their two beloved fur babies, creating a home filled with joy, resilience, and love. Whether he's coaching clients to achieve breakthroughs, exploring new cities, or simply soaking in the beauty of everyday moments, Kevin is committed to making the world a kinder, more compassionate place. You can connect with me on IG @kevinhuntting or on LinkedIN.