Summary

The plane and crew pulled chocks in D12 and transitioned to D16 today under sunny skies as the marine layer broke in the Portland area. The vacuum pump hit a delay in shipping but was finally delivered this evening. Pumping and cooling will commence tomorrow morning.

Concerns

None

Comments

Pilots had to utilize our alternate fuel stop landing location due to an unexpected issue at the primary location. The situation was handled impeccably.

Pictures

The Otter and the Commemorative Air Force's B-25 exchange glances on the tarmac in Bozeman.

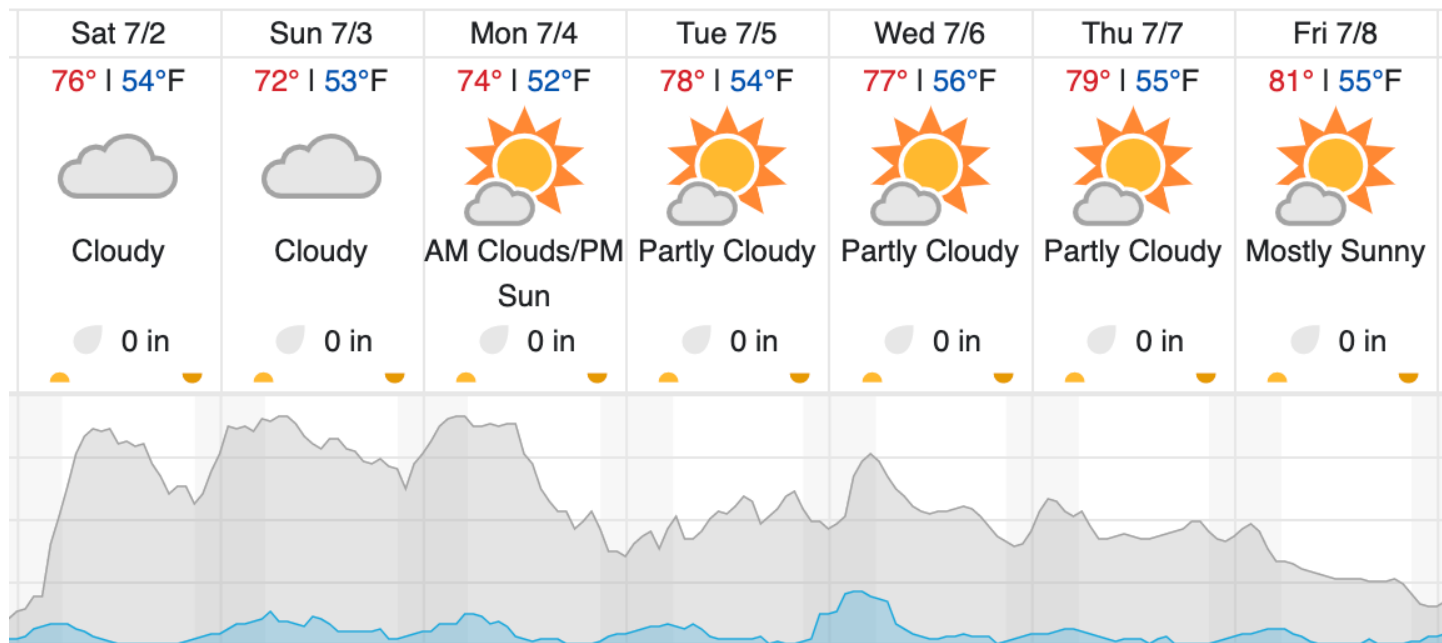

The Otter flies over the Bitterroot Mountains on the border of Idaho and Montana.

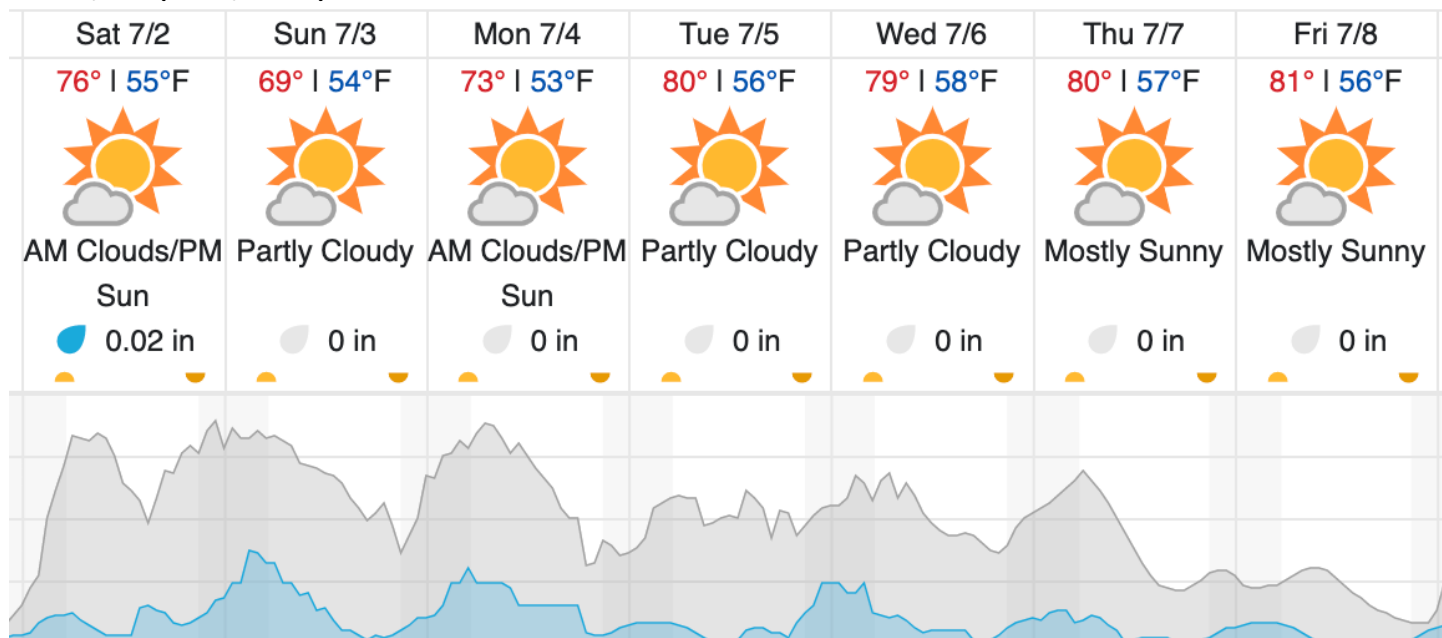

Inbound to Hillsboro with the Columbia River below and Mt. Hood in the distance.
