

The Blended Energies System and You

The Blended Energies System is the birthplace of the individuated soul and within it you are born anew each moment. Once creation begins it does not end. So you may as well relax and enjoy your co-creative-being status. You are the Alpha and the Omega, the All and the individual, limited and unlimited, both separate and whole. All of this is manifest as you, your sacred anatomy.

Because both the Totality and the individuation reside in your sacred anatomy, understanding their partnership will help you to enact real balance between your daily existence and your vast potential. To know the fundamental energy that guides and directs you will help you more completely understand the need you feel to serve, create and express love in your life.

The nutritious fuel that powers this system is blended out of the partnership of your own soul and the creative forces of the cosmos. It is unique to you, holding your motivation and the drive you feel to focus and attain your highest calling. But the fuel of your sacred anatomy is also, in sync with the spark of all life. This is the really big picture. Becoming awakened to the presence of that reality inside your Blended Energies System not only increases the tempo of your life experience but it stimulates the very foundation of universal consciousness alive within you. Giving you a greater sense of purpose and inspiring you to altruistic actions as a matter of being.

Function & Form: A System Overview

“As the darkness of night vanishes when the sun rises, so too the darkness of ignorance and delusion is dispelled when you gain knowledge of your True Self.”

--Krishna to Arjuna

Bhagavad-Gita

It turns out that one of the great mysteries of the ages is how a major chakra actually works. The chakras are part of one of the the subtle body's seven operating systems, the Blended Energies System, which is like the Cardiovascular System of the physical body in that it distributes vital life force and conducts it as fuel throughout the Human Energy Structure. It collects currents of energy that appear as shimmering lights as they separate from the core to fill the big fuel tank of the soul layer. Inside of the soul layer these pure frequencies are blended with universal energies and personalized through the subtle nervous system, the Template. This occurs in the E-Stomach located in this other system to create a perfect mixture that will nourish and tirelessly work to fuel, build and rebuild the whole.

Like the Cardiovascular, the Blended Energies System has a pumping action that originates with the master chakra, the divine gate. This chakra establishes the rhythm of the Blended Energies System at the first inspired crossing connection of core and returning individuation in the form of an incoming stream called a soul pathway. Each and every chakra is synchronized at the same rate and pumps in coordination with all the others in a Human Energy Structure 13 chakra rhythmic beat.

Every chakra has valves in their incoming and outgoing streams. The core and chakra streams behave as arteries; the swirling individuated currents as veins, returning ultimately to the arterial incoming soul pathway pulled to the core at the center. Each of the chakras is a connection-generating series of chambers and valves or gateways behaving a little like a heart. All thirteen chakras have specific jobs and each contributes in multifaceted ways to the operation of the HES.

The Blended Energies System charges and changes the individuated energies of the soul layer to enrich the constantly renewing fuel of the Human Energy Structure. These intelligent energies are the building blocks of the entire subtle structure. They create subtle form from intention, focus and pure inspiration and it is in the soul layer where they incubate and refine the raw materials for this purpose.

The energies of the soul layer best compare to bio layer blood and the BES to the Cardio Vascular System. The function of the major chakras is to move these energies in the form of light fuel from the soul layer through the core. Here, they are charged, changed and returned to the soul layer to further enrich the fuel. The major chakras move the blended energies much like the heart pumps blood. Together heart, blood, light fuel, the core, and chakras create health and vitality for the Human Energy Structure, a hybrid of subtle and materially manifesting energy. Similar to the pulse of the heart, the firing of the thirteen chakras combine to make a pulse that can be used to track the vitality of the entire body. Skillful reading of this pulse reveals health, imbalance, and shifts.

Chakras behave not so much as energy generators, but instead like transformative energy educators. Each one is made of organized streams of light swirling in the soul layer that shoot out of it at the anterior of the structure and are pulled inexorably toward the core. It is here, at the crossing point of the spinning currents of the vertical downward moving core and the equally spinning currents of the horizontal incoming triple current streams that the thirteen major chakras are born.

The contraction and expansion of the potent encounter between these six spinning currents creates the anatomy of the chakras. It is almost the same in all thirteen locations. What distinguish the individual chakras are the specific tasks and intentionally held purposes infused into the energies of the individual chakra meant to benefit and support the whole structure.

When the raw individuated energies encounter the core they “see God”. Through this they become informed with Divine purpose, filled with their Divine function and inculcated with Divine wisdom. This profoundly informs the energies changing them completely. In less than a second these energies snap into focus and a higher purpose.

The triple-current chakra streams go back into the soul layer where they break into single currents again and are gradually stripped of the knowledge gained in their encounter with the chakra and core. Informed currents add to the rarified mix of universal energies from other parts of the structure and the individuated soul to act as the building blocks for human subtle and material expression. You need a very unique brand of nutrition to be you and the energies of the BES will make sure you get it.

Spin Is In

The ultimate function of the Blended Energies System is to act as the fuel source for the expression of creative manifestation. But before that can even begin, the attraction and repulsion of the individuated to the One must happen in a series of locations along the core. These are where an organized system is born; energetic arterial super highways of the subtle anatomy you will come to know as the incoming soul pathways and out-going chakra streams. In the inner most edge of the soul layer points of alignment occur and these points develop into valves that gather and focus the individuated currents back into acceptable triple current streams that now have the potential to return to union with the core. Or at least that’s what they want...

What happens is a little different. Because the incoming energy currents are spinning horizontally and the downward thrusting core is spinning vertically. When they meet there is a toroid implosion like an in-breath followed by an immediate explosion outward similar to an out-breath. Even though the cursory visit with the core doesn’t last longer than a split second it is this combination of inspiration and expiration that initially gives shape to the chakra keeping it firing and pulsing with every energy intake. Still, the individuation keeps trying to return to the core. Like a river flows to the sea it is this primitive urge to return coupled with the inability of the core to accept the energies once individuated that make the co-creative reality within which we live; Source and individuation side by side in a spontaneous cosmic ballet.

The experience of union with the core is a thwarted attempt but a partial victory. The brief visit “informs” the energy currents changing them into a unified chakra stream and giving each single current as an informed representative of the BES. The out-going chakra stream is the empowered energy that is now filled with its own unique vision of Divine Oneness. It rapidly travels to the dispersal valve on the other side of the structure in the opposite part of the inner edge of the soul layer and is released again as a single current into the soul layer to inform and educate the fuel in its capacity as a representative of the relationship with the core and the individuation. The vast All and the dedicated individuated, you working as partners. It is not until this energy blends that we have the full impact of the Blended Energy System, the rich and nourishing fuel that sustains the subtle anatomy and ultimately the bio layer.

What Happens in a Chakra?

Warning: This is a deep dive into how this part of the anatomy works- it is technical and activating to the subtle self. Don't read it unless you are centered, hydrated and spacious. Don't attempt to “understand” it on a first read. Flow with it, breath and allow it to open within you as inspiration.

Individuation arises, swirling currents spin out of the core and the four aspects of the authentic-self emerge out of the core like a masthead on a ship. They bring a voice and presence to the nascent soul layer shaping and molding the human energy structure. Their rising to self-awareness inspires constant individuation out of the core and ultimately builds the Blended Energies System. This action of individuation happens at the inception of your soul and continues to occur as an ongoing operation of the sacred anatomy. Renewing you in every second, awake, aware, and in relationship with the vastness of all Creation.

Individuation happens at two locations: where the core enters and, to a much lesser degree, where it exits the soul layer in to the universal below the chi pool chakra. Both places funnel currents into the soul layer that combine to create its rainbow color. Approximately 50 percent of the core currents separate away from the downward thrusting core stream entering the container of the soul layer above the divine gate chakra.

Meanwhile the remaining core, wrapped inside of the core sheath, moves vertically through the anatomy of the Human Energy Structure to the lower end of the structure where beneath the chi pool chakra, more currents peel off as the core transits the soul layer for the second time. Inside the soul layer, many different currents swirl passing through a cleansing filtration at the four chi pool filters before the core leaves its sheath and exits the HES.

At the front (anterior) of the structure, randomly occurring single-current streams enter 13 organized alignment valves located in the inner edge of the soul layer. These streams reconstitute into perfect triple-current streams, mirroring the triple-current stream of the core; they are always in alignment with the core they are facing- blue facing blue, red-to-red and yellow-to-yellow. These 13 streams are called soul pathways and they hold all the potential and energy that will cause the chakras to generate even more energy. Even though they are organized, they do not yet have a specific job. These incoming energies will cross the core and form a major chakra, encircling the core like a donut with the core in the hole.

Generic soul pathways headed toward the core pass through the lesser gates and enter the anterior chakra chamber where each current has its own anterior node. Here the currents learn about function, purpose and wisdom of a specific chakra. This area is called intentionality, and what happens here is exactly that: the setting of intention as it relates to a specific chakra.

After this occurs, the two outside streams, function (blue) and wisdom (golden yellow) each split in half and create the blending energies of the Blended Energies System. All of the purpose current and half of each of the function and wisdom currents move through the anterior greater gate in the core sheath, which is the entrance to the core itself.

The remaining halves of incoming function and wisdom streams go to the sides of the chakra and push through two different anterior osmotic barriers -- the gold into the wisdom corridor to the left side of the core and the blue into the function corridor on the right side of the core. Since these partial current streams don't cross the core, they stay unchanged in the corridors, with the intention of the specific chakra firmly held in an unchanged and cooling position.

The other halves of function and wisdom join all of the red purpose current to pass through the anterior greater gate and forge through the core. In this way these energies all become informed by the power of the surging core. They emerge from the downward-moving core currents on the other side changed by the encounter, transformed by the visit to the holy of holies and pass through the posterior greater gate in the core sheath into the chakra, once again bristling with energy.

The currents are next received and cooled by receptivity, which is the job of the posterior chakra chamber at the rear of the core. The twin to intentionality, receptivity receives the split-off energies from wisdom and function and the core-charged purpose, function and wisdom energies and blends them all.

This blending action mellows the currents enough to release them through the posterior lesser gate into the outgoing chakra stream. After leaving the chakra, the stream takes the name of the chakra it just passed through, such as the heart chakra stream, changing from the generic and uninformed soul pathway to a specific chakra stream with the job of carrying the message of that chakra throughout the Human Energy Structure.

Each chakra stream reaches a dispersal valve in the inner edge of the soul layer and breaks once again into three independent currents of energy, each destined to spin out its chakra lessons in the soul layer, delivering the function, purpose and wisdom messages of a particular chakra as well as the qualities of intentionality and receptivity that have imbued the exiting chakra stream with so much focus.

These currents swirl for a time in the soul layer, gradually sharing all the information they carry in a process of slow and deliberate release. This educates and inspires the structure, sustaining and guiding it to fulfill the best possible version of itself.

In the final leg of their journey, the single current streams, now spent and depleted, pass through the eight big filters, four at the divine gate and four at the chi pool where they are stripped of any remaining message, debris or contamination. These filters are placed above and below both of the soul layer chakras and to the left and right sides. They effectively box the soul layer chakras in a filtering system that keeps energies leaving and going into them as clear as possible. Now, the function, purpose and wisdom currents are once more generic, ready to begin the cycle over again!

FYI: This section is easier to grasp and may be all you need to understand the basics of the anatomy of the BES.

Blended Energies System at a Glance

- The chakras control the rhythm of the one body, each one synchronized at the same rate and pumping in coordination with all the others in a Human Energy Structure 13-chambered beat.
- The soul layer houses the fuel for the Human Energy Structure, which powers the structure.
- The Blended Energies System stimulates the blending feature of the fuel so it can be assimilated by the whole.
- The main chakras are generators stimulated by of the action of the core charging the individuation and directing a portion to deliver the specific message of the soul path and core encounter.
- Eight big filters in the Blended Energies System filter the energies of the soul layer.

- The primordial and acquired function, purpose and wisdom of the Human Energy Structure is nurtured and contained in the soul layer to provide the building blocks that make up the entire structure.

The Blended Energies Journey

- The Blended Energies journey begins with the four aspects of the authentic self. It is their rising to self-awareness that inspires constant individuation out of the core and ultimately builds the Blended Energies System.
- When the core peels off single-current streams into the soul layer, it is called individuation. This happens at two locations: where the core enters and, to a lesser degree, where it exits the one body. Both places funnel currents into the soul layer that combine to create its rainbow color. As approximately 50 percent of the core currents separate away from the downward thrusting core stream and become independent they enter the container of the soul layer at or near the divine gate chakra.
- Meanwhile the remaining core, wrapped inside of the core sheath, moves vertically through the anatomy of the Human Energy Structure to the lower end of the structure where at the chi pool chakra, more currents peel off as the core transits the soul layer for the second time. Finally, the core leaves its sheath and exits the HES.
- Inside the soul layer, many different currents swirl and pass through filtration at both the divine gate and chi pool filters.
- At the front of the structure, randomly occurring single-current streams enter 13 alignment valves located in the inner edge of the soul layer. These streams reconstitute into perfect triple-current streams, mirroring the triple-current stream of the core; they are always in alignment with the core they are facing- blue facing blue, red-to-red and yellow-to-yellow. These 13 streams are called soul pathways and they hold all the potential and energy that will cause the chakras to generate even more energy. Even though they are organized, they do not yet have a specific job. These incoming energies will cross the core and form a major chakra, encircling the core like a donut with the core at the center.

- Generic soul pathways headed toward the core pass through the lesser gates and enter the anterior chakra chamber where each current has its own anterior node. Here the currents learn about function, purpose and wisdom of a specific chakra. This area is called intentionality, and what happens here is exactly that: the setting of intention as it relates to a specific chakra.
- After this occurs, the two outside streams, function (blue) and wisdom (golden yellow) each split in half and create the blending energies of the Blended Energies System. All of the purpose current and half of each of the function and wisdom currents move through the anterior greater gate in the core sheath, which is the entrance to the core itself.
- The remaining halves of incoming function and wisdom streams go to the sides of the chakra and push through two different anterior osmotic barriers -- the gold into the wisdom corridor to the left side of the core and the blue into the function corridor on the right side of the core. Since these partial current streams don't cross the core, they stay unchanged in the corridors, with the intention of the specific chakra firmly held in an unchanged and cooling position.
- The other halves of function and wisdom join all of the red purpose current to pass through the anterior greater gate and forge through the core. In this way these energies all become informed by the power of the surging core. They emerge from the downward-moving core currents on the other side changed by the encounter, transformed by the visit to the holy of holies and pass through the posterior greater gate in the core sheath into the chakra, once again bristling with energy.
- The currents are next received and cooled by receptivity, which is the job of the posterior chakra chamber at the rear of the core. The twin to intentionality, receptivity receives the split-off energies from wisdom and function and the core-charged purpose, function and wisdom energies and blends them all.

- This blending action mellows the currents enough to release them through the posterior lesser gate into the outgoing chakra stream. After leaving the chakra, the stream takes the name of the chakra it just passed through, such as the heart chakra stream, changing from the generic and uninformed soul pathway to a specific chakra stream with the job of carrying the message of that chakra throughout the Human Energy Structure.
- Each chakra stream reaches a dispersal valve in the inner edge of the soul layer and breaks once again into three independent currents of energy, each destined to spin out its chakra lessons in the soul layer, delivering the function, purpose and wisdom messages of a particular chakra as well as the qualities of intentionality and receptivity that have imbued the exiting chakra stream with so much focus.
- These currents swirl for a time in the soul layer, gradually sharing all the information they carry in a process of slow and deliberate release. This educates and inspires the structure, sustaining and guiding it to fulfill the best possible version of itself.
- In the final leg of their journey, the single current streams, now spent and depleted, pass through the eight big filters, four at the divine gate and four at the chi pool where they are stripped of any remaining message, debris or contamination. These filters are placed above and below both of the soul layer chakras and to the left and right sides. They effectively box the soul layer chakras in a filtering system that keeps energies leaving and going into them as clear as possible. Now, the function, purpose and wisdom currents are once more generic, ready to begin the cycle over again!