

The Blended Energies Journey

- The Blended Energies journey begins with the four aspects of the authentic self. It is their rising to self-awareness that inspires constant individuation out of the core and ultimately builds the Blended Energies System.
- When the core peels off single-current streams into the soul layer, it is called individuation. This happens at two locations: where the core enters and, to a lesser degree, where it exits the one body. Both places funnel currents into the soul layer that combine to create its rainbow color. As approximately 50 percent of the core currents separate away from the downward thrusting core stream and become independent they enter the container of the soul layer at or near the divine gate chakra.
- Meanwhile the remaining core, wrapped inside of the core sheath, moves vertically through the anatomy of the Human Energy Structure to the lower end of the structure where at the chi pool chakra, more currents peel off as the core transits the soul layer for the second time. Finally, the core leaves its sheath and exits the HES.
- Inside the soul layer, many different currents swirl and pass through filtration at both the divine gate and chi pool filters.
- At the front of the structure, randomly occurring single-current streams enter 13 alignment valves located in the inner edge of the soul layer. These streams reconstitute into perfect triple-current streams, mirroring the triple-current stream of the core; they are always in alignment with the core they are facing- blue facing blue, red-to-red and yellow-to-yellow. These 13 streams are called soul pathways and they hold all the potential and energy that will cause the chakras to generate even more energy. Even though they are organized, they do not yet have a specific job. These incoming energies will cross the core and form a major chakra, encircling the core like a donut with the core at the center.

- Generic soul pathways headed toward the core pass through the lesser gates and enter the anterior chakra chamber where each current has its own anterior node. Here the currents learn about function, purpose and wisdom of a specific chakra. This area is called intentionality, and what happens here is exactly that: the setting of intention as it relates to a specific chakra.
- After this occurs, the two outside streams, function (blue) and wisdom (golden yellow) each split in half and create the blending energies of the Blended Energies System. All of the purpose current and half of each of the function and wisdom currents move through the anterior greater gate in the core sheath, which is the entrance to the core itself.
- The remaining halves of incoming function and wisdom streams go to the sides of the chakra and push through two different anterior osmotic barriers -- the gold into the wisdom corridor to the left side of the core and the blue into the function corridor on the right side of the core. Since these partial current streams don't cross the core, they stay unchanged in the corridors, with the intention of the specific chakra firmly held in an unchanged and cooling position.
- The other halves of function and wisdom join all of the red purpose current to pass through the anterior greater gate and forge through the core. In this way these energies all become informed by the power of the surging core. They emerge from the downward-moving core currents on the other side changed by the encounter, transformed by the visit to the holy of holies and pass through the posterior greater gate in the core sheath into the chakra, once again bristling with energy.

- The currents are next received and cooled by receptivity, which is the job of the posterior chakra chamber at the rear of the core. The twin to intentionality, receptivity receives the split-off energies from wisdom and function and the core-charged purpose, function and wisdom energies and blends them all.
- This blending action mellows the currents enough to release them through the posterior lesser gate into the outgoing chakra stream. After leaving the chakra, the stream takes the name of the chakra it just passed through, such as the heart chakra stream, changing from the generic and uninformed soul pathway to a specific chakra stream with the job of carrying the message of that chakra throughout the Human Energy Structure.
- Each chakra stream reaches a dispersal valve in the inner edge of the soul layer and breaks once again into three independent currents of energy, each destined to spin out its chakra lessons in the soul layer, delivering the function, purpose and wisdom messages of a particular chakra as well as the qualities of intentionality and receptivity that have imbued the exiting chakra stream with so much focus.
- These currents swirl for a time in the soul layer, gradually sharing all the information they carry in a process of slow and deliberate release. This educates and inspires the structure, sustaining and guiding it to fulfill the best possible version of itself.

- In the final leg of their journey, the single current streams, now spent and depleted, pass through the eight big filters, four at the divine gate and four at the chi pool where they are stripped of any remaining message, debris or contamination. These filters are placed above and below both of the soul layer chakras and to the left and right sides. They effectively box the soul layer chakras in a filtering system that keeps energies leaving and going into them as clear as possible. Now, the function, purpose and wisdom currents are once more generic, ready to begin the cycle over again!