

Anchoring the Property

Anchoring the Property is essential especially if the land has seen trauma or has been a water site. Some land can feel like it is floating. This will make it hard to concentrate and harder still to get things done. Bringing things to completion will take a lot more energy and income will be washed away.

Bees, worm farms, and even ant hills can lower intensity on a property. If you are struggling with the level of energy and it feels like you have to work night and day pets can help hold the intensity down. Anchoring the Property can also to shift it to a more livable frequency. Both cats and dogs will take on geopathic disturbance to spare their owners the struggle. Cats especially like to curl up and go to sleep right in a releasing vortex or a disturbed location.

Plants are often challenged by toxicity and also by the pace and pattern of the land. They will grow in odd shapes responding to the releasing currents that leave the Earth's crust and begin to travel upward into the atmosphere.

Trees when they are exhausted by the pace of the energy of the place will struggle to survive. They will begin to drop limbs or have more deadwood than before. When they start looking skimpy they may be going into decline. Call an arborist before you lose a big beautiful tree because they will finally die.

The microbiology of the soil will literally hold a record of the toxins and pollution that have been dumped into the ground.

Anchoring the Property

Only do this after all release work is completed. If you do not legally own the property please follow the instructions carefully. To assume ownership is an ethical breach so please honor ownership even if you are a caretaker. Renters are caretakers and have a different standard than an owner. Apartment dwellers can work with the land beneath and around their building but must be cautious to not bring the energies through other people's apartments. Stop at the ceiling and the floor. Go down through the exterior face of the building as best you can and into the earth underneath.

1. Using the Lower Hemi EDGE and with permission.
2. Place huge pillars of Universal Love and Light in the 4 corners and center of the property. Do this even if there is a house there- remember you are working with the land beneath, your house will only be happier. Go down into

- the ground shallow if you rent 10-20 feet and much deeper if you own up to 100 feet.
3. In Anchoring the Property building your relationship with the nature spirits will help you maintain the Anchor. Always listen for the direction the land gives you. It will tell you what it needs. But you must listen for its voice. Listen for the 'yes' the permission to work and special direction will follow for your land.
 4. When the pillars of light are established bring in Balance Earth to complete.
