

Balancing the Earth with Source Energies

Many different substances and liquids are in currents and flowing within the Earth. Metal, water, electricity, pipes and conduits, geo thermal, lava flows, waste- everything from sewage to radioactive groundwater, nuclear waste, general toxicity exists in currents or streams of things flowing underground. These can be deep or closer to the surface.

All of these feel different and are revealed to you through experience. See if you can sense and douse the underground pipes around your house. Look for the difference between water pipes and underground electrical conduits. Plumbing carrying waste is different from water pipes carrying drinking water. Anything contained in a pipe feels different than the energies that are loose and flowing in the earth. All of these currents of energy can affect people and hurt their health or well-being or support and encourage vitality.

Groundwater has been changing dramatically throughout the Western US and around the world. We have been engaged in draining our subterranean ground water to use for irrigation and to drinking for decades. To support ever increasing populations for the last 200 years we have sacrificed the balance in the land and the Western US has now entered a massive drought. This shortage of groundwater is causing the trees and the older plants to suffer and even die. Watering the older trees is different than watering new trees. Older trees don't require as much, but they do need deep soaking once or twice a season especially in the high heat. But with the ground water drying up, this need is changing- it's hard to know what the old trees need from us- but Tree Talking can help.

The migration of vast numbers of people all over the globe influences the health of the land and can affect the sustainability of the landscape. Coupled with world climate change and wrong-headed and unaware human interventions with eco systems, the construction of enormous tracks of land paved with concrete highways, steel posts anchored into the Earth acting like huge acupuncture needles to secure highways and bridges, massive heavy buildings built on fault lines, water relocation projects such as the damming of rivers, culverting of streams, and the destruction of seasonal creeks, added to the piping of entire eco systems of water from high mountains to desert flatlands, and you have a disastrous recipe for literally shifting the climate landscape. This has happened to different degrees in California, Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, and Nevada to name a few.

In places where there were ancient prairies such as Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Missouri- killing the buffalo and digging up the rich loam that for thousands of years held the soil in place to make farms created, in the 1930s one of this continents greatest ecological disasters- the dust bowl spread a fine dust for thousands of miles in every direction clogging lungs, machines and obscuring the sky.

So how can we recover the land? Obviously, we have to learn about the soil and the original Earth. Amend the dirt, fertilize, plant ecologically, use the common sense God gave ducks, and irrigate intelligently to keep a healthy garden. Not fouling our own nest is the first rule of the survival of a species. The second is not to kill the young. We could learn from the animal kingdom on both counts!

To begin the healing process- dedicate yourself to stewardship of your land. Vow to reclaim it, restore the ecological harmony and if need be and heal it by Balancing the Subtle Energy bringing in powerful Source Energies.

To balance the Earth with Source energies there are different Earth Work techniques and procedures that can help. Pipe Guards, Predecessor Chi , Property Orientation, Consecration, Reconsecration, Anchoring the Property and Earth Acupuncture are all designed to shift the energy and support vitality of your land. Shifting the Predecessor Chi shifts the land and begins the healing recovery. Earthwork can support the land to actually change its Orientation so that instead of hanging on and trying to live up to the earlier imprint it allows the next owner to assert themselves and hopefully strike a healthier balance. Coupled with a Consecration the Land will be singing!

You can accomplish all of these with Earth Balancing. Consecration and Reconsecration, as well as Anchoring Your Property using specific subtle energies. Changing the Orientation is essentially balancing the land to be in harmony with you, the owner or caretaker of the property. You can do this by dowsing for and then bringing in the EW Energies. You can release Predecessor Chi and the toxicity of trauma and issues with Earth Acupuncture but your land will always need Balancing after that release. Bringing in Subtle Energies is a critical piece in restoring balance and harmony after doing almost all Earthwork.
