A couple of years ago I gave a talk at the Watermark Conference in Moline, IL. I gave the talk, titled "Art Models in Art History," and it was basically a discussion of some of the things that art history can learn from the sciences. I think that it is fair to say that the ideas at the heart of the talk were well received. This year, I'm speaking at the CNP in San Francisco. I want to take the talk and make it a little bit more accessible to the layperson, and make it more focused on the relationship between science and art. The title will probably stay the same, but if I can speak on the history of science, I think that will be a great backdrop to the ideas I want to present. The talk will be given at the Society for the History of Natural Philosophy (SHNPhi) annual meeting on October 10th. It will be held in the same room where the conference is held, which is about the size of a standard dorm room. I will be speaking on Saturday in the morning, from 12 to 1. I have a panelist speaking on Friday night, from 5 to 6, and I will speak on Saturday evening at 7. If you are at the CNP, you can hear me speak, if you register for the conference. You can also hear me speak if you go to the conference site, and look at my abstract. It is titled, "Art Models in Art History: Examining the Connections Between Art and Science." And if you are at the
