Godfrey Wilson (politician) Robert Godfrey Wilson (November 14, 1924 – February 22, 2014) was a Canadian politician and businessman. He served in the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia from 1966 to 1986, with the British Columbia Liberal Party. Biography Wilson was born in Vancouver, British Columbia, to Elizabeth (née Webster) and Robert Wilson. He attended the University of British Columbia, graduating in 1947. He married Claudia Charlebois on February 28, 1948, and the couple had three children: Robert, Timothy, and Vanessa. Wilson's career began when he returned to Vancouver and became a salesman. He began his political career in 1964, serving as a city councillor for six years. He was elected to the British Columbia legislature in 1966, and served in the cabinet of Gordon Gibson as Minister of Housing and Social Services. Wilson retired from politics in 1986, having lost a bid to return to the assembly as an independent after a change in party leadership. In a statement on his death, federal Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said that he had known and admired Wilson for "many years" and considered him "an exemplary citizen and man of tremendous character, strength and humility."
