

Louise White

From: Porirua Construction <poriruaconstruction@gmail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, 15 September 2020 9:02 PM
To: dpreview
Subject: [EXTERNAL] District plan trees

Hi

District plan has rules about height recession planes for houses from boundaries to restrict how much light a neighbours house might block your light but has nothing about trees which can do the same thing.

Currently height recession planes for a house are 3m up from the boundary then on a 45 degree angle from there.

I think this same rule should apply for trees.

If you have a problem with your neighbour tree and it is over this height recession plane you should be allowed to get it professionally cut back so that it comply.

This should be added to the new district plan!

--

Kind regards

Rowland Rich

0274 316 007

www.poriruaconstruction.co.nz

www.facebook.com/PoriruaConstruction