P MRG'S 2015 Healthcare Marketing Researchers Connect (formerly the PMRG Annual National Conference) is focused on leveraging new, strategic insights, to optimize the impact of business decision making. The 2015 event content is focused on enhancing the roles of market researchers by using new data technologies and methodologies that can provide the deep insights needed for making key business decisions in a time- and budget-constrained environment. Market researchers must evolve practices to meet the information needs for the changing healthcare environment. These information resources will fuel key strategic business decisions that optimize brand performance in the pharma, biotech, medical device, diagnostics, and allied health areas.

The dynamic healthcare environment and the rapidly growing information age of big and thick data have required marketing researchers to use both "deep" and "broad" information to fuel business decision making. The good news is that, fundamentally, marketing researchers have always been astute at piecing together insights from various sources to discover the business implications of these insights. More impactful insights will enable market researchers to increase their value to their organizations and end clients.

Attendees will gain a better understanding of how changes to the healthcare landscape affect framing and prioritization of key business issues, how to best address key business questions from a methodological standpoint, how to use new data technologies, and how to synthesize and leverage insights within a broader business model and context.
