On the Impact of Pre-Training

In Fig.3 the network was pre-trained on a set of stimuli that partially overlapped with the stimuli used in the training itself. This pre-training is not essential for the different outcome of the discriminability of the easy and the hard stimuli. Even without pre-training the easy stimuli became less discriminable after training, while the hard stimuli became more discriminable (S6 Fig).