To learn more about what happens when you submit an incident report, please visit our Reporting Options page.

Reporting just means letting IDHR know something has occurred. It does not automatically trigger a formal investigation process. If what you share raises a concern about community safety, IDHR may assess further, but you as an impacted person never have to participate in that process if you do not want to.

If you're concerned about retaliation or identifying yourself, you can use an anonymous email address or forgo including your contact information when filling out a reporting form. Without contact information, our ability to follow up is limited. If you're not sure you are ready to fill out a reporting form, you can also connect with confidential resources who will not inform anyone of what you share without your permission.

If you share some form of contact information, IDHR staff will reach out via email to see if you'd like to set up a time to talk about available resources, supportive measures, and resolution pathways.

Prohibited discrimination and discriminatory harassment that you can report through these forms include:

- Discrimination on the basis of a protected class (i.e. race, color, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, pregnancy, religion, disability, age, genetic information, veteran status, or national or ethnic origin)
- Harassment on the basis of a protected class
- Sexual Harassment
- Sexual Assault
- Intimate Partner Violence
