FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

What is a bias incident?

Collapse All

× What is a bias incident?

A bias incident is an act of bigotry, harassment, or intimidation that is motivated in whole or in part by bias based on an individual's or group's actual or perceived race, color, creed, religion, national origin (including shared ancestry, shared ethnic characteristics, and citizenship or residency in a country with a dominant religion or distinct religious identity), gender, age, sex, marital status, disability, public assistance status, veteran status, sexual orientation, gender identity, or gender expression. Bias often stems from fear, misunderstanding, hatred, or stereotypes and may be intentional or unintentional.

× Is a bias incident the same as a hate crime?

Both bias incidents and hate crimes consist of conduct that is motivated by bias. However, hate crimes involve a criminal act, such as assault or vandalism. Bias incidents do not necessarily involve criminal activity and may come in the form of microaggressions (often well-intentioned but extremely hurtful and biased remarks from others) and other noncriminal acts of bias.

× What is the University's position on free speech and academic freedom?

The University is committed to safeguarding the free expression rights of all University community members, even if the expression is biased, hateful, or contrary to University values of equity and diversity.

At the same time, the University recognizes that biased and hateful expression causes harm and fractures in our campus community that must be addressed through education, dialogue, and support for those who are negatively impacted.

For more information, visit the Academic Freedom and Free Speech at the University of Minnesota webpage and the Office for Student Affairs Freedom of Expression page.

Reporting a Bias Incident

Collapse All

× Can I report a bias incident to a University office other than BRRN?

Yes. University members who believe they have experienced, observed, or otherwise learned about discrimination, including discriminatory harassment, can report to Equal Opportunity & Title IX (for employee and third party conduct) or the Office for Community Standards (for student conduct).

University members can also report bias incidents to their local unit or department. For example, students who experience a bias incident in University housing may report the incident to Housing and Residential Life. Faculty who experience or witness a bias incident within their department may report the incident to their department chair or dean.

- × What happens when I report a bias incident to BRRN?

The BRRN receives reports of bias incidents on the Twin Cities campus. It responds to all reporters with written information about supportive resources and refers reports to the appropriate office that can effectively respond through investigation, educational coaching, supportive measures, or other response strategies.

- × If I submit a report about someone specifically, will they learn it's from me?

The BRRN will keep a reporter's identity private to the extent possible given the University's responsibility for supporting a safe and nondiscriminatory working and learning environment. Anonymous reports can be submitted by using this reporting form.

Why a Bias Response and Referral Network?

Collapse All

- × When was the Bias Response and Referral Network created?

President Kaler charged the BRRN in January 2016. It was initially called the Bias Response Team (BRT), but the name was changed in November 2016 to better reflect its purpose and work.

- × Why is the BRRN needed at the U of M?

Bias incidents can undermine the University's efforts toward equity and inclusivity, cause distress and harm to those who experience them, and limit our community's ability to excel in our work and learning. The BRRN provides an avenue for community members to report these concerns so that they can be routed to the University office that can appropriately respond.

- × Where can I find more about the University's principles and conduct codes that help inform the work of the BRRN?
