HUNT in MOZAMBIQUE

More than twice the size of South Africa's Kruger National Park, the Niassa Reserve's 42 000 square kilometers make it not only by far the largest conservation area in Mozambique, but also one of the most extensive protected areas in Africa. It was first established in 1954, then was abandoned during the hostilities in the 1970s and '80s until the peace accord was signed in 1992. The new Mozambican government then took a bold and innovative step and entered into an arrangement to manage Niassa Reserve as a public/private partnership.

When flying from the coastal town of Pemba westward across northern Mozambique, we are impressed by the unbroken expanse of woodland that lies below. There are no hard boundaries here and it is impossible to tell from the air when we are overflying the protected area. Niassa National Reserve lies at the heart of the region, midway between the coast and Lake Niassa, with the Ruvuma River forming its northern boundary as well as the international border between Tanzania and Mozambique. Just a few years ago the roads in it were some of the most challenging in eastern or southern Africa; today an excellent tar road extends from Pemba almost all the way to Lichinga on the highland plateau above Lake Niassa.

Mozambique is a rough diamond with some of the best hunting blocks in Africa.

This outfitter's area is on the southern boundary of the great Niassa Game Reserve where an abundance of animals roam. The concession is very remote and has lots of game. What makes this area better than the famous Zambeze Delta block is that you can hunt buffalo in Dagga Boy format. They call these old Buffalo "Dagga Boys".

They are large old bulls that have been kicked out of the herd and spend all day wallowing in Mud. "Dagga" means mud in Zulu. They have really short tempers - best to stay away. The mud is to get rid of parasites. In the Delta you mainly going to shoot out of a herd, and shooting out of a herd is not always a good thing. Eighty Percent (80%) of the Buffalo in a herd are still young and haven't had the chance to breed. Leopard, hyena and lion are absent in the delta flood plains due to too much water. With this outfitter, you can get 4 of the Big 5 in 1 hunting area. His anti-poaching team is doing a very job to ensure that the wildlife here is looked after. His moto is that "hunting is the biggest part of conservation".

This Outfitter has been 98% successful on Leopard and almost all hunters shoot a Buffalo. The company was built with a sound conservation spirit and strong community bonds which is largely demonstrated by the quality of the game in the Lureco River Basin area after ten years under its management. Expect to track game on foot...blinds are built with grass...the quarry is still respected. You can expect to enjoy an evening fireplace with your stories of passed journeys and the ones to come.

Clients will fly to Tambo International Airport in Johannesburg (JNB) and then fly from JNB to Pemba, Mozambique (POL). If possible the outfitter will meet clients on Johannesburg airport to help with all gun permits etc.
