

Poolside Promises

Linda Brees doesn't take chances. Given the last time she told a man she loved him he moved to Atlanta, the talented printworks artist clings to the security of a safe job, a steady paycheck and a largely dateless life. But she panics when six years later she discovers her stay at a Florida condo has her rooming next door to the guy who broke her heart.

Mason Hauser lives as free as the wind. Loving the energy of meeting new people and never staying anywhere more than twelve weeks, the traveling nurse still regrets breaking up with his high school flirt and college sweetheart right after she said the L-word. So when they unintentionally reconnect, a flood of old memories has the born wanderer reconsidering life on the move.

Falling for him all over again, Linda fears he'll never want to settle down. And though Mason loves her visit at his next position in Seattle, he's convinced she'll never let go her need for traditional stability.
