WE LIVE IN TIME

With stunningly nuanced performances from Oscar nominees Florence Pugh and Andrew Garfield, this cleverly structured romance, directed by John Crowley and penned by screenwriter Nick Payne, delves into the profound question of how to make the most of the time we have in this world.

From their very first encounter, Almut (Pugh) and Tobias (Garfield) have experienced anything but an ordinary relationship. When Almut faces a life-altering medical diagnosis, with treatment options that may or may not be effective, should she risk spending precious time on treatments, or embrace what remains of her life to the fullest?

We Live in Time unfolds across three distinct timelines, offering a layered experience of their relationship that deepens our understanding of how memories intersect with the present and how life's meaning builds through shared moments.

Bringing this intricately crafted story to life, Pugh captivates as a young woman striving to balance her personal connections with her ambitious career, while Garfield delivers a career-defining performance, using Tobias' quiet demeanour to reveal an underlying depth of emotion.

FALLING INTO PLACE

When Kira seeks refuge from her complicated love life in a quiet Scottish coastal town, she meets Ian, a kindred spirit dealing with his own family struggles. As they form a deep connection, their time together is fleeting, and both return to London, unaware they now share the same city. Can they find each other again? And will they grow into the people they need to be before that moment comes?

Aylin Tezel's tender debut film is a poetic and intimate exploration of longing. The piano score, composed by Ben Lukas Boysen and Jon Hopkins, beautifully captures the reflective and melancholic emotions of the characters, whose identities seem suspended in transition.

Julian Krubasik's camerawork enhances the sense of fragility as Kira and Ian open up to one another. Expansive shots of the rugged, snowy Skye landscape evoke a feeling of liberation, offering a space where Kira and Ian can truly be themselves. This starkly contrasts with the cramped, bustling streets of London, reflecting the characters' exhaustion and sense of confinement. With sensitivity and insight, Falling Into Place offers a hopeful perspective on love, relationships and family.

2023 | 113 min | United Kingdom, Germany | Drama | CTC

Director: Aylin Tezel
Cast: Aylin Tezel, Chris Fulton, Alexandra Dowling, Layo Akinlude, Rory Fleck Byrne

"Imaginative filmmaking, tender direction, and two great performances that become absolutely magic when on screen together, makes it a sweet film with a good heart."

CONCLAVE

Featuring a commanding central performance from famed British actor Ralph Fiennes comes the star-studded dramatic thriller Conclave, which delves into one of the world's most secretive and ancient rituals—the selection of a new Pope.

The story centers on Cardinal Lawrence (Fiennes), who is entrusted with overseeing this clandestine, centuries-old process following the sudden death of the beloved Pope. As the Catholic Church's most powerful leaders gather from across the globe and are sequestered within the Vatican, Lawrence becomes entangled in a web of conspiracy and uncovers a secret that could threaten the very foundation of the Church.

Based on UK author Robert Harris' internationally bestselling novel, with a screenplay by Peter Straughan (Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy) and a score by composer Volker Bertelmann (All Quiet on the Western Front), this gripping film, set over a few tense days in Vatican City, is filled with suspense and intrigue.

Featuring an ensemble cast that includes Tucci, Rossellini, Castellitto and Lithgow, Conclave is a rich and complex narrative exploring ambition, morality, and the dynamics of power.

AUSTRALIAN PREMIERE

HARD TRUTHS

Returning with his 23rd film, director Mike Leigh reunites with Marianne Jean-Baptiste (Secrets & Lies) to craft a challenging yet compassionate exploration of modern family life in London. This latest work is darkly humorous and full of piercing insights, focusing on the dynamics within an extended family.

At the centre is Pansy (Jean-Baptiste), a hypersensitive woman quick to take offense and prone to outbursts. She relentlessly criticises her husband Curtley (David Webber) and their adult son Moses (Tuwaine Barrett), to the point where they no longer bother to argue. Pansy picks fights with strangers and enumerates the world's flaws to anyone who will listen, particularly her cheerful sister Chantal (Michele Austin), who may be the only one still capable of showing her empathy.

As the film reveals Pansy's pain and the impact it has on her family, it explores whether they will reach a breaking point. Leigh's trademark humour and attention to detail infuse each scene with tenderness, offering a profound understanding of these complex characters and why even the most difficult among them deserves compassion.

FIREBRAND

In the final months of King Henry VIII's reign, his sixth wife, Katherine Parr, faces the perilous challenges of the Tudor court. Portrayed by Alicia Vikander, Parr is a champion of progressive ideals, courageously advocating for change. Her beliefs, however, put her at odds with the ailing and increasingly paranoid monarch, played by Jude Law. When Henry appoints her as Regent in his absence, Parr's newfound authority unsettles the courtiers, who begin to plot against her and cast doubt on her loyalty to the King.

Firebrand is a captivating historical drama that shines a spotlight on the often-overlooked story of Katherine Parr. Vikander brings depth and intelligence to the role of the determined Queen, while Law's portrayal of the volatile Henry VIII is a standout performance. Directed by Karim Ainouz, the film boasts stunning visuals, a sharp script, and a talented supporting cast, including Simon Russell Beale, Eddie Marsan, and Sam Riley. Firebrand weaves a gripping tale of ambition, survival, and the power struggles faced by a formidable woman in a world that undervalues her intellect.

BLUR: LIVE AT WEMBLEY STADIUM

Working as a companion piece to Blur: To the End, this epic is a two-hour cinematic concert experience that captures the 2023 historic shows which occurred at the historic Wembley stadium, where Blur performed their iconic, beloved songs for 150,000 fans in a transcendent, once-in-a-generation event, with the live performances earning rave 5-star reviews. This energetic concert film harnesses the eclectic set of fan favourite tracks such as Song 2, Girls & Boys, and Coffee & TV.

Offering a transcendent snapshot of a band rekindling its tenacious roots, there is an acknowledgement that time has passed, governments have fallen, and last drinks have been called, but the tenacity of tracks from Parklife meshed with the middle-aged melancholia of work from the band's recent release The Ballad of Darren offer a sonic tapestry that echoes across generations. ## THE SONG REMAINS THE SAME

The iconic "Rockumentary" returns to cinemas profiling legendary rock band Led Zeppelin 1973 performances at Madison Square Garden in New York City, interspersed with fantasy sequences that reflect each band member's personality and interests. The kinetic concert footage captures Led Zeppelin at the height of their powers, showcasing their dynamic live performances of hits like "Stairway to Heaven," "Dazed and Confused," and "Whole Lotta Love."

LIES WE TELL

In this modern reimagining of Sheridan Le Fanu's Gothic novel Uncle Silas, an orphaned heiress must navigate sinister family plots to claim her inheritance. After her father's death, 18-year-old Maud (Agnes O'Casey) inherits the secluded estate of Knowl, though she won't come of age until 21. Her uncle Silas, named as her guardian in the will, takes on the role despite his notorious reputation, which includes rumours of gambling debts, rakish behaviour, and even murder. Silas arrives at Knowl with his aimless son Edward, frivolous daughter Emily, and the severe governess Madame.

What should be a lively household becomes stifling and oppressive as Silas's genteel facade begins to crumble, revealing his true intentions: to secure Maud's inheritance, ideally through a marriage between her and Edward. If that fails, darker methods are at his disposal.

MERCHANT IVORY

In the 1980s and '90s, Merchant Ivory Productions became synonymous with prestige arthouse cinema, known for its stunning cinematography, lush settings, elegant costumes, enchanting music, complex characters, and literary adaptations. The company was led by director James Ivory and producer Ismail Merchant, who first met at the Indian Consulate in New York. Despite their different backgrounds, the pair formed an inseparable professional and personal bond, although the latter was "understood, but never talked about." With the addition of screenwriter Ruth Prawer Jhabvala and composer Richard Robbins, they created a powerhouse team. Despite their films' success, the company often operated on tight budgets, leading to challenges on set, including a notable industrial action by a prominent actor.

Filmmaker Stephen Soucy explores the struggles behind Merchant Ivory's elegant façade, sharing amusing and candid stories from cast and crew. ## THE RADLEYS

Have you ever thought something was a little... off about the neighbours? In the case of The Radleys, the neighbours are vampires. In this funny yet sinister adaptation of Matt Haig's book of the same name, Damien Lewis and Kelly Macdonald play a married couple, Peter and Helen. They appear relatively normal – a nice house, two teenage children (who do not know about the whole vampire thing), and normal jobs and events around them. That is until their daughter, having recently turned vegan, eventually gives in to her hereditary bloodlust and after that, things start to get really weird!

Avoiding the usual Vampiric cliches, this dark comedy offers a fresh, inventive take on the classical vampire troupes, with Lewis (in a dual role) and Macdonald sinking their teeth into the suburban gothic aesthetic. ## THE RETURN

Director Uberto Pasolini's adaptation of Homer's Odyssey reunites The English Patient stars Ralph Fiennes and Juliette Binoche in a film that exudes the classical essence of the Greek epic with a distinctly British spin, capturing the steely resolve of its source material, where every gaze is intense, and each word and breath is meticulously measured.

The story begins as Odysseus (Fiennes), is washed ashore on Ithaca after more than 20 years away, having fought in the Trojan War. His wife, Queen Penelope (Binoche), has waited faithfully all this time, while their son Telemachus (Charlie Plummer) has lost hope in his father's return and fears for his mother's safety as increasingly aggressive suitors pressure her to remarry and crown a new king.

This UK/Italian co-production offers lavish visuals, tightly constructed sequences and showcases Fiennes and Binoche at the very top of their game. ## THIS TIME NEXT YEAR

Meet Minnie and Quinn, who discover at a New Year's Eve party that they share a unique bond — they were born on New Year's Day, in the same London hospital, just one minute apart. But will this cycle of passion ever end, or are these souls trapped in a never-ending loop of desire?

WIDOW CLICQUOT

Based on the true story of the “Grande Dame of Champagne,” Widow Clicquot follows Barbe-Nicole Ponsardin (1777–1866) who, at the age of 20, became Madame Clicquot after marrying poetic, unconventional François, the heir of a winemaking family. Named Veuve (the French word for widow) at age 27, she is determined to protect her family’s legacy and boldly challenge the men — as well as the state — set on stripping her of her vineyards.

Determined to advance her husband’s theories about soil chemistry and revolutionary techniques in bottling, Barbe-Nicole wagers on the next harvest and her own blend of sparkling wine. Challenged by the irregularity of the seasons, the aggressive competitor Monsieur Moët, and the Napoleonic Code of 1804 barring women from running businesses, the elegant and luminous widow must succeed or lose everything.

Telling the tale in retrospect over a 10-year span from approximately 1797 to 1807, director Thomas Napper entwines a sparkling story of flourishing female entrepreneurship with an account of doomed lovers whose legacy reverberates in the bubbles.
