Reclay StewardEdge Joins IAWMA to Advance Aviation Resource Recovery

Toronto, Canada (July 6, 2022) - The International Aviation Waste Management Association (IAWMA) is proud to welcome Reclay StewardEdge to our sustainability, aviation, catering, economic circularity, and waste/recovery roster experts. Together, we will shape Canada's waste recovery landscape and enhance the industry's international capacity to adopt circularity, further solidifying IAWMA's reputation as aviation's most trusted circular economy knowledge source.

Reclay StewardEdge is at the forefront of the circular economy, with a particular focus on product stewardship, and has extensive experience throughout the entire supply chain of recyclable materials. Dedicated to the advancement of recycling and finding innovative approaches to minimize and manage waste, Reclay StewardEdge has established relationships with clients worldwide with offices across North America and Europe to bring a truly global approach to product stewardship and a circular economy.

"We are excited to partner with IAWMA, and we know that we can help them achieve their goal of eliminating all solid waste resulting from air transportation activity worldwide," says Adrian Vannahme, Vice President of Business Development of Reclay StewardEdge. "We are motivated every day to advance towards a circular economy – in the aviation sector and beyond – that will truly make a difference for our planet."

"Reclay StewardEdge brings a wealth of knowledge and experience to the IAWMA. Together, we can further enhance the development of an international platform for material management the aviation industry is currently missing from its narrative," said Gregoire James, Commercial Director & Founder of IAWMA. "Together, with our programs and standards development, we see Reclay StewardEdge as a strategic and valuable member and partner given their vast international presence and depth of experience in developing and managing resource recovery."

About IAWMA

IAWMA is a non-profit organization dedicated to reducing and eventually eliminating all solid waste resulting from air transport activity worldwide. IAWMA was founded in 2019 after the first-ever independent global cabin waste recycling study published by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine and sponsored by the US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). In 2022 IAWMA, in partnership with SAE International (SAE), will champion the development of global standards for products, processes, and services in business and commercial aviation, airports, and flight kitchens. Together IAWMA and SAE will lay the foundation for the industry's future needs, help it meet increased demands for sustainability, and accelerate its adoption of the circular economy on an international scale.
